

SPECIAL SESSION BEFORE SEPTEMBER 1 ON SALES TAX ASKED BY COMMISSIONERS

MINERS REJECT 'LAST PROPOSAL' TO END DEADLOCK

Workers Turn Down Plan To Maintain Status Quo for Two Years as F. D. R. Deadline Passes.

NEW YORK, Thursday, May 11.—(AP)—A spokesman for the bituminous operators announced early today the United Mine Workers had rejected their "last proposal" for reopening the soft coal mines of 26 states.

R. L. Ireland, the spokesman, said the operators had proposed immediate resumption of the operations stopped at the expiration of the old contract last March 31, when nearly a half million miners stopped work.

He said the operators had sought an agreement for resumption at the wage and hour scale of the expired contract.

Previously, John L. Lewis, president of the mine workers, declared he had proposed returning to work four times but had been rebuffed by the mine owners.

Passes Deadline.

The announced breakdown of negotiations came after joint and separate sessions of the CIO miners' union and the operators, who renewed their meetings at the demand of President Roosevelt in the face of an industrial fuel famine. Roosevelt Tuesday told the conferees he wanted an agreement by Wednesday night.

"In a last effort to bring about a settlement, the operators made the following proposal," the operators' statement said:

"1. The mines will resume operations immediately.

"2. The rates of pay, hours of work and conditions of employment that obtained in the Appalachian basic agreement and the several district agreements which expired March 31, 1939, and all the customs and practices thereunder shall be continued until March 31, 1941, except as modified below.

Exclusive Agent.

"3. The old contract shall be changed to conform to recognition of the UMW as the exclusive bargaining representative for all the employees of all the classes covered by the Appalachian and the district agreements, except the exempted classes, and the Appalachian conference and its component district associations shall be established as the proper bargaining unit under the national labor relations act.

"4. That negotiations continue for the purpose of finding some formula agreeable to both parties which will preserve the integrity of the agreement and of the jurisdiction of the United Mine Workers of America from attacks made under the provisions of the national labor relations act, the parties agreeing that they will if necessary jointly support emergency legislation designed to accomplish this purpose.

"This proposal was rejected by the miners."

After the issuance of the statement, the conferees sat down to eat, and it appeared possible they might resume discussions.

Governor A. B. Chandler announced from Frankfort, Ky., that unless the mines of eastern Kentucky are reopened by May 15, he will call for a special session of the Kentucky legislature.

Disappear Mysteriously

JESSICA WHITMAN.

MARY RUTH HAWKINS.

Hunt Started For 2 Missing Atlanta Girls

Parents Completely Mystified by Disappearance of Pair, 13.

Grave alarm of parents brought an intense search last night for two 13-year-old girls—students at West Fulton High school—who were reported as having last been seen about 8 o'clock Tuesday morning. The parents were completely mystified.

The girls, Jessica Whitman and Mary Ruth Hawkins, spoke to a classmate near the school, where all three are freshmen, and one of them volunteered, "We're going to visit an aunt on Baker road."

The meeting was reported by the classmate, Hattie Bell Jackson, when inquiries were instituted later. No such relative was known either to Mr. and Mrs. Joe W. Whitman, of Hasty place, or Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Hawkins, of West Lake drive, the parents.

Jessica is five feet, two inches tall, weighs 120 pounds, has brown hair and hazel eyes and was wearing a boy's shirt and print skirt. Ruth is five feet, three inches, weighs 102 pounds, has black hair and eyes and was wearing a print dress. Neither had other apparel with her.

School officials said both have excellent records. None of their school companions could offer aid in explaining the disappearance.

Fare Forgets His Change
—Cabby Is $204.25 Richer

CLEVELAND, May 10.—(AP)—Cab driver, Ray Tucker, 28, took a chance—and a stranger's check for $212.

His fare asked him to cash the check at a nearby bank, saying he would meet him there to settle the bill. The check was good, and Tucker waited until his meter ticked up to $7.75.

Now, three days later, Tucker has $204.25 change for a man whose present address the bank was unable to furnish.

Police Have 100 Bicycles
—Now They Want Owners

A hundred bicycles—and no place to go.

That's the plight of Detective Harry Williams. But it doesn't matter. Williams doesn't want to go anywhere.

On the contrary, he wants victims of recent bicycle thefts to visit police headquarters between 8 a. m. and 4 p. m., to identify the recovered property, he said last night.

AFL TEXTILE UNION KEY POSTS WON BY SOUTHERNERS

Council Fox, of Savannah, Elected President as Control Is Wrested From Eastern Group.

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. WASHINGTON, May 10.—Southern workers, after years of struggle, leaped into the saddle of the AFL branch of the United Textile Workers at the national convention here today.

A Georgian man was elected president and two South Carolinians were named as vice presidents in an election that wrested control of the organization from the woolen textile workers of New England who have dominated the union's affairs since its birth.

A Georgian and six other southerners were elected to the union's executive council of 15 members.

Fox New President.
Council M. Fox, 36-year-old resident of Savannah, who for two years has been in charge of the AFL textile campaign in the south, is the new president.

Fox is not only the first southerner to head the nation's textile workers but is the first head of the union who has actually worked in a textile mill. At the age of 12, he entered a textile mill in Mooresville, N. C., his native city, and his supporters for the presidency of the union acclaim him as the only leader in their history who actually understands the problems of a mill hand.

Victory for Googe.
Fox's election is a victory for George Googe, southern leader of the AFL, whose headquarters are in Atlanta. Googe has been fighting to have Fox elevated to the presidency because of the strength that will give the organization among all the textile workers of the south. Southern mill workers have been discouraged about union affairs because of their inability to share the control of the organization with the New Englanders, none of whom were bona fide mill workers.

The two vice presidencies that the south captured in the election here today went to John Pollard and Gordon Chastain, both of Spartanburg, S. C.

Other officers elected were: Anthony Valente, Lawrence, Mass., secretary and treasurer; Joseph Sylvia, Providence, R. I., vice president; Edward Venasse, Holyoke, Mass., vice president; and Mrs. Carrie Gallagher, Cleveland, Ohio, vice president.

Fox succeeds Francis J. Gorman, who resigned earlier in the day. Just before the election, Gorman refused a nomination from the floor.

The convention created the position of chairman of the union's executive council and by a unanimous vote elected Fox to that post.

EARLY CLEMENCY IS REQUESTED FOR 'DICK' GALLOGLY

Friends Ask Rivers To Forget Family's Wealth in Considering Parole; Fiancee Is Present.

By The Associated Press. Governor Rivers was asked yesterday to forget the prominence and wealth of Richard C. Gallogly's family and give his parole application the same treatment as if "he were from the poorest family in the state."

Attorney Stonewall H. Dyer, of Newnan, and other petitioners at a public hearing before the Governor contended the position of Gallogly's socially prominent Atlanta family had involved his clemency appeal in politics and hindered his efforts to obtain release from a life prison sentence.

Gallogly, now 29, was sent to prison ten years ago when, after two mistrials, he signed a statement that he had a part in the murder of Willard Smith, Atlanta drug store clerk, in a holdup attempt.

"Done to Save Pal."

Dyer introduced witnesses and a mass of documentary evidence at the parole hearing in support of a claim that Gallogly's statement was made to avert the election of George Harsh, a college mate, who had been convicted of the murder but as a result of the statement also received a life term.

A further contention was that Gallogly not only had no part in the slaying but sought instead to dissuade Harsh. A statement from L. K. Webb, one of the jurors at Gallogly's first trial, set forth:

"On Sunday, April 7, 1939, in Fulton county tower, in the presence of Dick Gallogly, George Harsh made the following statement to me:

"I can never forget Dick's trying to keep me from going into the drug store in which Willard Smith was killed on the night of October 16, 1928."

Boykin Opposes.

Solicitor General John A. Boykin, who is opposing the parole appeal, contended, however, that both youths were "equally guilty" and should have the same punishment. He insisted in cross-questioning of petitioners in Gallogly's behalf that the Smith slaying was a "thrill" murder perpetrated by the two college students after campus pranks, shooting out traffic lights and minor robberies had become too tame for them.

Boykin will continue the presentation of his side tomorrow. Flanking him in the state senate chamber where yesterday's sessions were held were relatives and

'Hey, Skinny! We're Going to Camp If Doc Says Okay'

The doctor and his stethoscope came to see these underprivileged youngsters yesterday at the Atlanta Mission's Community house on Alexander street preparatory to their attending the mission's open air camp near Hapeville this summer.

METHODISM ENDS 23-YEAR SCHISM

10,000 See Rites Bringing 8,000,000 Wesley Followers Into One Fold.

KANSAS CITY, May 10.—(AP)—In worshipful ceremony the Methodist Church was proclaimed one united body tonight by the 900 delegates and 56 bishops who have spent two weeks in perfecting its government.

"The Methodists are one people," that was the key phrase repeated time after time by Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, of Washington, D. C., in the service symbolically sealing the schisms who have divided the American followers of John Wesley for more than a century.

Ten thousand persons watched the ceremony climaxing 23 years of unification work by bringing the 8,000,000 members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Protestant Church into one organization.

None Oppose.

Every delegate and bishop rose with raised hand as Bishop John M. Moore, of Dallas, put the final motion for approval of the plan of union. No one stood on the call for opposition votes.

"We do so declare," chanted the delegates in unison, as Bishop Moore read:

"The Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Protestant Church are and shall be one united church."

The chant was repeated as he read the five formal sections of the declarations of union.

The Pledge of All.

The entire delegation joined with the bishops in pledging: "To the Methodist church thus established we do solemnly declare our allegiance, and upon all its life and service we do reverently invoke the blessing of Almighty God, Amen."

Bishop A. Frank Smith, of Houston, Texas, led the meeting in the formal "hallowing of worship," closing with all joining in the declaration:

"We do here and now consecrate

15 Children Examined for Mission Camp

400 To Go on Week's Outing If Generous Atlantans Donate Funds.

By LUKE GREENE.

Visions of a week of happiness in the country wrestled with childhood fears yesterday as approximately 15 Atlanta underprivileged children took physical examinations at the Atlanta Mission's Community House on Alexander street preparatory to attending the mission's open-air camp near Hapeville this summer.

The tousled-haired youngsters were a little awed by the sight of the doctor and his stethoscope, but when they thought of the great time they were going to have this summer romping through the woods and swimming in the pool at the mission camp, they submitted to the examination without a whimper.

About 400 children who spend the greater part of their lives in the drab, pent-up sections of the city will be taken to the camp for a week's outing if generous Atlantans respond to the plea of Dr. Felton Williams, director of the mission, for necessary funds to carry on the work. A total of $5 is needed to keep a child at the camp one week.

No child is allowed to go to the camp without first taking a physical examination to insure that he has no communicable disease and is healthy enough to stand the week's outing. Yesterday's group was the first to be examined.

The camp will open about June 1.

$150,000 ARMORY APPEARS ASSURED

City Council Group Okays $35,000 Request To Match Project Funds.

Construction of a $150,000 armory for the 122d infantry of the Georgia National Guard appeared virtually assured yesterday as city council's finance committee approved a $35,000 request to match county and federal funds for the project.

The committee's action was subject to the approval of the budget commission. Fulton county has pledged $25,000 for the armory, and the National Guard $10,000. The rest will be supplied by WPA.

Plans Outlined.

Plans call for construction of the armory on a 100-acre tract donated by the state at the Confederate Soldiers' Home. The National Guard is housed now in the city auditorium.

Councilman John A. White made the motion that the money be set up for the armory, and Councilman Cecil Hester seconded the motion. The vote was unanimous. The $35,000 will be taken from the $50,000 recently obtained in the swap of the old city hall site for a triangle in front of the city auditorium to be converted into a park.

Hartsfield Approves Plan.

Mayor Hartsfield added his approval to the plan by saying "the armory will be a fine bargain for both sides." He explained that removal of the National Guard from the auditorium would permit further improvements there and at the same time give the National Guard an opportunity to expand. Present plans call for conversion of the 122d infantry into an artillery unit.

Sulfanilamide Cures Smallpox And Prevents Disfigurement

CHICAGO, May 10.—(AP)—Treatment of smallpox with sulfanilamide—so successfully that disfigurement was prevented in three of four cases—was reported today in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Dr. Walter O. McCammon, of Springfield, Ky., author of the article, administered the new drug to four persons. All, he wrote, "recovered immediately after the subsidence of the fever and the symptoms of the initial phase."

Three suffered only passing skin eruptions and these disappeared rapidly. The fourth had only three pock marks.

PLAN TO PROVIDE TWO MILLION FOR COUNTIES PUSHED

Consolidation Program, Diversion of Highway Funds To Meet Crisis Opposed by Convention.

By HERMAN HANCOCK, Constitution Staff Writer.

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 10. Urging immediate enactment of a sales tax to bolster failing county revenues, the 25th annual convention of the Association of Georgia Commissioners ended today with these important actions:

1. Urged a legislative session by September 1 to provide $2,000,000 for counties to replace revenues lost in home-stead and personal property exemptions. This is the time at which counties will set their 1939 tax rates. The sales tax was advocated not only for this relief but for education, social security and allied activities.

Oppose County Mergers.

2. Opposition to any general consolidation of county governments, but favored mergers where they would produce economies. The resolution contended "mergers of counties will not solve county fiscal problems."

3. Opposed diversion of state highway funds, citing the gasoline tax is a special sales tax and proceeds should be devoted to development of highways and roads.

4. Favored economy in state and county governments and asked that any new taxes be restricted to meet actual needs.

Ask Bond Refund.

5. Urged approval of a constitutional amendment June 6 providing for the refunding of $2,600,000 state highway bonds for 1939-41 to enable early resumption of highway contracts between that department and the county governments. Suspension of these contracts, for which the state paid $1 a day for each prisoner worked on projects, threatens to force counties to surrender to the state about 75 per cent of the 7,500 convicts now maintained in county camps. Commissioners contended that the counties cannot possibly keep them without financial assistance.

6. Recommended that the legislative committee and the board of managers study further a seven-point tax structure revision proposal by Dr. R. J. Kennedy, of Statesboro, president of the Citizens' Road League of Georgia.

7. Approved resolutions praising The Atlanta Constitution and Major Clark Howell, editor and publisher, for sponsoring the 1937 progressive government awards and the 1938 plant-to-proper state-wide programs.

8. Passed resolutions commend-

George Wins Senate Fight To Stop Cotton Export Plan

Russell Splits With Colleagues on Subsidizing Sales Abroad.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS, Staff Correspondent.
WASHINGTON, May 10.—After a spirited debate by both sides of the chamber, Senator George of Georgia today won his fight against the administration-sponsored cotton export subsidy plan.

The vote came on a motion to suspend the rules to permit incorporation in the pending Agricultural Department annual subsidy bill of the Bankhead amendment. The amendment would grant an export subsidy on both raw and manufactured cotton as well as freeze government holdings in the staple.

The vote on suspension was 36 for to 37 against.

Senator Russell, also of Georgia, and chairman of the subcommittee on agriculture of the appropriations committee, had reported the bill to the floor minus the Bankhead amendment. Russell spoke in favor of the subsidy plan, while Senator George made a lengthy speech against it.

Senator Russell insisted there was nothing new in the plan. The government, he said, had already undertaken similar moves by subsidizing the export of 100,000,000 bushels of wheat to foreign markets.

"One argument before our committee was that adoption of the amendment would bring about two-price cotton, I am for two-price cotton if it will help our farmers. The cotton farmer buys in a protected market; why should he be protected himself. Corn, beef, pork and everything else I can think of is protected except cotton. Why discriminate against the growers of the largest money crop in the south?"

George Answers.
Charging that the Bankhead amendment was so full of possibilities of harm for the industry that the senate should not pass it without the fullest consideration, Senator George told his colleagues that if congress was to save cotton farmers it must first save the staple as an article of commerce and consumption.

He said that if the government would permit cotton to go into the free market, and market in an orderly way over a period of time, the cotton held by the commodity credit corporation at the rate of 100,000 or 150,000 bales a month, the world price would come somewhere near the minimum loan price which might be fixed on American cotton.

View of Consequences.
But, he warned, if the government tied up the cotton as proposed in the Bankhead amendment, if the American price was pegged, if a subsidy was given to the foreign producer, if the American manufacturer was crippled in his constant fight against substitutes at home, then cotton would go back into the loan, the secretary of agriculture would be compelled to hold cotton and pay a subsidy in order to get rid of it. He predicted that cotton in Brazil, Peru, Argentina, Egypt and everywhere in the world was now ready for the world market this year, and that any subsidy, if effective, would have to be large enough to induce cotton speculators of foreign countries, including speculators in the United States having warehouses abroad, to buy the cotton so far as the 1939 crop was concerned.

A Cudgel for Foe?
"Then what?" he asked. "You will transfer American cotton into the warehouses of foreign countries to be held over the American farmer's head as cudgel with which to destroy him. Nothing good can come of this Bankhead proposal."

"Will not the Democratic party present a magnificent and beautiful picture as it comes before the electorate for re-election in 1940, saying 'Look what we have done!' We have sold cotton to the spinners of Great Britain and of France and of Germany and of Italy, and even Japan—make no mistake, they will get your cotton—we have sold it to them cheaper than we would sell it to our own American spinners. We have sold cotton goods, when that cotton has been processed, to the citizens of Japan and of Germany and of Italy and of England and of France and of Russia, cheaper than you can sell it to your own American men and women who need cotton and who ought to have it."

Wants Just Profit.
Senator George insisted that he wanted the cotton farmer to receive just compensation for his cotton, but that the Bankhead amendment left loan cotton where it is, to remain a disturbing factor, and that it paid a subsidy to the foreign buyer if he would take the new crop.

"It would force American mills to pay any price which may be exacted of them through the loan provisions of the farm act of 1938," George concluded. Both critics and opponents of the bounty plan conceded that existing law and some $50,000,000 of funds already in the farm bill would enable the administration to ignore the senate vote, if it wished, and carry out the plan anyway.

Can Go Ahead, Anyway.
Senator George insisted that he wanted the cotton farmer to receive just compensation for his cotton, but that the Bankhead amendment left loan cotton where it is, to remain a disturbing factor, and that it paid a subsidy to the foreign buyer if he would take the new crop.

George added he might try to attach to the pending farm bill a provision preventing use of any of the funds for subsidies.

SEVEN INDUCTED BY ETA SIGMA PSI

Two Atlanta Freshmen Are Initiated.

Seven freshmen at Emory University yesterday donned masks and gowns in traditional ceremony, symbolizing their election to Eta Sigma Psi junior college honorary leadership fraternity.

They are George Wells and Kenon Edwards, Atlanta; Roy Emmet, Cedarstown; William Fackler, Wadley, Ala.; Jack Mathers, Jacksonville; Arch Tolbert, Columbus; and Tom Whiting, Camilla.

Elected on the basis of character, scholarship and personality, they observed silence from 9 o'clock yesterday morning to 9 o'clock last night when they were formally initiated.

unveiled with ceremony at the school at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon. It is the gift of the Parent-Teacher Association.

Those taking part will include Jere A. Wells, county superintendent; Mrs. Walker Browne, representing the association; Miss Caroline Jeter, principal; P. D. Hopkins, Miss Kathleen Mitchell, Miss Glennie Watkins, Carl Howell, Mrs. J. F. Welch and Mrs. Sarah Redwine Brown, niece of Miss Campbell, who will perform the unveiling.

Products increased during the winter of 1938-39.

DEMOCRATS ELECT MRS. MAX LAND

Women Will Hold Fund-Raising Party.

Mrs. Max Land was re-elected president of the women's division of Fulton County Democrats at a meeting held yesterday afternoon. Serving with her will be Mrs. B. M. Boykin, first vice president; Mrs. Jere A. Wells, second vice president; Mrs. George M. Murray, third vice president; Mrs. John A. White, recording secretary; Mrs. Lucile Wing Hockenbush, assistant recording secretary, and Mrs. Carlton Binns, corresponding secretary.

After reviewing the club's work for last year, Mrs. Land announced a card party for 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the Henry Grady hotel. Money raised will be given to the Democratic campaign fund. Committee for the party includes Mrs. A. P. Treadwell, chairman; Mrs. Land, Mrs. T. J. Ripley and Mrs. Robin Wood.

FRANCE TO CONSTRUCT 3D AIRCRAFT CARRIER

PARIS, May 10.—(AP)—The navy ministry announced today that orders had been given for construction of the 18,000-ton aircraft carrier Pauline, to be named for the war-time premier and war minister, Paul Painleve.

The carrier will be built at the Penhoet shipyard, where a similar vessel, the Joffre, already is under construction.

The French navy now has only one aircraft carrier in service, the 22,148-ton Bearn, completed 12 years ago.

COTTON GINNERS MEET HERE MAY 19
State and National Groups Plan Sessions.
W. H. Lovett, of Dublin, president of the Georgia Cotton Ginner's Association, announced yesterday that the association's annual convention will be held at the Henry Grady hotel in Atlanta on May 19, and the National Cotton Ginner's Association will convene there on May 20.

Lovett, who is completing his third consecutive year as president of the state association, said "both conventions are expected to be most interesting, as many vital problems facing cotton men will be discussed."

Among the speakers to be heard will be John C. Thompson, of Dallas, Texas, executive secretary of the Texas Ginner's Association and vice president of the National Cotton Ginner's Association, who will speak on "The Ginner and the Association," at the May 19 session.

N. C. Williamson, of Lake Providence, La., a director of the National Cotton Council, will also speak at that session on "The National Cotton Council."

ANDREW S. JOHNSON DIES IN KNOXVILLE

Naming two Atlanta men as officers and selecting this city as the site for its 1940 convention, the Georgia Funeral Directors' Association yesterday prepared to adjourn its annual convention at Macdon following a business session this morning.

TRAFFIC 'RESULTS' PRAISED BY KREML
Credits Them to Stricter Enforcement.
Tighter law enforcement is responsible for the reduction of traffic accidents in Atlanta, in the opinion of Lieutenant Frank Kreml, famous traffic expert and author of the nationally known Evanston system of traffic control. Lieutenant Kreml paused here yesterday en route to Chattanooga. He called on Mayor Hartsfield and spent a few hours checking traffic bureau records at police headquarters. Commenting on progress made here, he said, "The police department has been putting on steam and getting results."

ARNALL TO DELAY
LEGALITY OPINION
ON JAMES OUSTER

Labor Bureau Official Appeals to Governor for Reinstatement as Hulet Abolishes Post.

Attorney General Ellis Arnall said yesterday it would be several days before he would be ready to hand down an opinion on the legality of the abolition of the office of executive director of the Unemployment Bureau of the Labor Department.

The director's post was held by Lem P. James and the abolition order was issued by Commissioner Ben T. Hulet. James applied to Governor Rivers for reinstatement of his office and the Governor has referred the matter to the attorney general.

To Make Study.
"It is a lengthy law and I am going to study it thoroughly before I render an opinion," Attorney General Arnall said. "It may not be ready before next week."

Amendments to the Georgia unemployment compensation act designed to reduce employer contributions or taxes, will be recommended to the legislature at the earliest possible date, if such reduction appears feasible, Commissioner of Labor Ben T. Hulet said yesterday.

The only material reduction possible under the act, he stated, would be application of merit rating for employers based on their employment record or labor turnover, and 1941 is the earliest he can recommend its adoption.

Employer Ratings.
The law provides investigation and study of operations of the act upon the basis of contributions and benefit experience for three years. Hulet said an advisory committee will soon begin a study with the intention of submitting their rating recommendations to the bureau of unemployment compensation.

Under Title 9 of the Social Security act, employers of eight or more workers, generally in commerce and industry, are required to pay an excise tax of 3 per cent on their total annual payroll to the federal government.

State Levies.
The Georgia act levies contributions at 2.7 per cent which may be credited in entirety against the federal levy. The contributions are pooled in a benefit trust fund and must be used exclusively for the payment of benefits. Administrative expenses are paid by the government.

Jobs were found for 546 unemployed workers 40 years of age and over by the state employment service last week, Hulet announced. There were 1,822 placements during the week.

LEGION LAYS PLANS FOR STATE MEETING

10,000 Georgia Veterans Expected Here June 20 for Three Days.

Legionnaires of the fifth district yesterday settled down to the serious work of planning entertainment and a program for the 10,000 Georgia World War Veterans expected to attend the annual state American Legion convention here June 20, 21 and 22.

Convention headquarters were opened yesterday in Room 511, Henry Grady hotel. State Commander Logan H. Kelley, of Buford, announced.

Commanders of the various Legion posts in the fifth district comprise personnel of the arrangement committees and a preliminary convention conference will be held by committee chairmen Sunday in Macon when reports will be made to the state commander.

Special attractions at the state convention will include a gala downtown parade, a drum and bugle competition and a military ball to be held in the municipal auditorium.

Georgia leads the nation, as of May 1, in total early enrollment for this year. On May 10 there were 14,100 Georgia legionnaires enrolled, which is 2,500 more than those registered last year. This increased membership won for the Georgia division the right to second place in the national convention parade in Chicago in September. Mississippi won first place.

Cotton Export Subsidy

The problems of cotton are so varied and complicated that it is to be doubted if there lives the man who comprehensively understands them all. Add to this the fact that it is a matter of practical impossibility to find any so-called expert whose views are not open to bias and suspicion, and it is little wonder that congress flounders around in a succession of futile attempts to find a panacea.

The latest proposal, to grant an export subsidy of 2 cents per pound, with the announced purpose of revitalizing exports and thus relieving the burden of "carry-over" on the domestic market, seems to be, however, among the more unwise remedial endeavors.

For it should be plain that payment of a 2 cents a pound subsidy to cotton exporters, can result only in providing the foreign textile manufacturer with cheaper cotton than his American competitor can buy. The 2 cents a pound payments will not go to the cotton farmer, but by the simple process of market balancing, will inevitably make American cotton sold abroad just that much cheaper. Already, in anticipation of possible enactment of this scheme by the United States congress, Liverpool cotton quotations are dropping further than normal below those of the United States cotton exchanges.

The foreign manufacturer already enjoys the advantage of lower cost labor and, if he gets this added advantage in the price of his raw material, it can easily be imagined what will happen to the American textile markets, where foreign made goods must compete with the products of our own mills.

Then, probably, there will be demands for an increased tariff against foreign textiles, once again building up that complication of charges and subsidies and offsets which is, actually, responsible for much of cotton's woes today.

It all goes back to the basic injustice, that the cotton farmer must sell on an unprotected, world market, and buy on a tariff protected market at home.

The keenest minds in the country have attempted, in vain, to adequately improve the situation of the cotton farmer. There can be, therefore, no proper attempt to point such a way here.

But, from any angle, it seems self-evident that the American cotton interests, from producers to consumers, can expect no benefit out of a scheme to use American money to bribe foreign purchasers to buy more of our products. It just doesn't make sound logic.

"Heart Balm"

For many years it has been generally known that the awards by courts or juries of so-called "heart balm" damages to women who sued men for breach of promise, constitute, in many instances, nothing more nor less than legalized blackmail.

It is, therefore, exceptionally interesting to discover, by means of a recent survey poll conducted by the Ladies Home Journal, that a majority of American women are opposed to such payments, by either men or women. It should be noted that there have been cases where wealthy women have been compelled to pay "heart balm" to men who claimed they had been jilted.

Sixty per cent of the women questioned in the poll do not believe women should be able to sue for breach of promise and three-fourths said wealthy women should never have to pay men for breach of promise.

On a somewhat parallel question, whether men should have to pay alimony to their divorced wives, two-thirds of the women questioned believe that women without children and less than 30 years of age should not get alimony. The practice of sending men to jail for non-payment of alimony was approved by 57 per cent of the women, but only on condition that the man in the case is able to pay the alimony, but refuses.

The survey, however, seems to have missed one important problem. That is the jailing of alimony delinquents regardless of ability to pay. It is one of the most cruel anomalies of modern American life, that men are not infrequently held in jail for non-payment of alimony, although loss of jobs or income was the sole cause of the lapse and although they can never hope to acquire the needed money while they are held behind bars.

It is the same practice as that in England, centuries ago, when people were tossed into jail, there to rot their lives away, for non-payment of debt. The Debtors' Prison of old London was a medieval disgrace. Alimony Row in many American jails is a parallel institution of modern times.

With No Reverse

One of the most competent of observers of the European scene has described the Nazi machine, with Hitler driving, as a car with only a high speed forward and no reverse, travelling a narrow and dangerous road. If Hitler takes a wrong turn and heads toward the precipice he cannot back up and he dare not stop, lest the machine might not start again in high.

This is a picturesque and succinct analysis of the predicament in which Hitler finds himself. He called into being a force which is rapidly getting out of his control, yet he cannot halt it nor deflect it away from the tragic end which looms. He can only go along, resigned to fate or, perhaps, blind to the disaster which must, in the final story, come.

Therein lies the greatest danger to the world today. For, desperate and seeking any means to advance his own prestige, Hitler may turn to war as the only road to salvation of the Nazi idea.

On the other hand, the best European minds say the chances are against war in Europe this year, though they do expect a constant state of uncertainty, an almost constant series of "crises." For on such does the Nazi theory feed itself. It is the theory of force or the threat of force. So far, at least, it seems to have justified the faith of its followers.

Yet, in calm analysis, the rising tide of German dominance can only be laid at the door of the nations aligned upon the other side. Their treatment of the conquered Germany, at Versailles and since, proves that despite the gloss of outer civilization, it is really potential war force which dictates the policies of all the European powers. For they treated Germany as a vassal land until, under Hitler's leadership, the Germans regained their strength as a fighting nation. Then it was the threat of that strength which forced concessions to the once humbled German nation.

Hitler was right when he said that no nation without strength of arms to back its demands ever gained a hearing at a conference.

All this is true, yet the inevitable death of Nazism is foreshadowed. For no idea which insults the freedom of mankind, as does this propagandized, regimented enslavement of entire peoples, can ultimately survive. The laws of nature doom it to death and the laws of God decree that it must be forgotten.

That Afternoon Off

Not so many years ago an afternoon off each week, in any business, was a luxury to be indulged in only by the boss. Gradually, however, businessmen saw the wisdom of letting certain employees off on Saturday afternoons, realizing from their own experience the value of getting away from the daily grind if only for a few hours. The practice has now become almost universal.

Naturally there were many people, such as workers in retail establishments who, because of the large volume of business customarily done on Saturdays, were not permitted to participate in the luxury of a half-day off. And it always seemed impracticable to permit clerks to leave the stores during midweek for fear of discouraging prospective business.

A year or two ago, however, this theory was given a severe jolt in Atlanta. All food stores began closing at 1 o'clock on Wednesdays. After all, it was argued, people could purchase their food supplies before 1 o'clock, or the day previous if necessary, without a great deal of inconvenience. The food stores have been closed ever since on Wednesdays. The people are accustomed to it. The food store workers, like the office workers, now get their weekly afternoon off.

But there still remain thousands of workers in other retail stores who work six full days each week. It is now felt, in the light of the food store experience, that these employees could be given Wednesday afternoon off, during the summer months, without working a hardship upon or adversely affecting business in any way. Many of the store operators, themselves, feel this way about it. Many are letting their employees off.

It is now a generally accepted fact that the employee who gets the proper amount of recreation and relaxation is a better employee as a result of it. An afternoon off each week during the summer would contribute much to this end.

Robert Ley, leader of the Nazi labor front, exhorts his countrymen to lead a "more joyous life." You'd better, boys, or Gopebels will print more jokes.

The annual problem is on us of what to do with the saved daylight. Happily there is no lack this year of municipal scandals to let it into.

Jack Roper, survivor of the last Louis fight, has been reluctant since to discuss the matter. All Jack knows is what he read in the papers.

A savant predicts that future populations will be living underground, and if they don't join up with the United Mine Workers, John Lewis will be furious.

Editorial of the Day

LEARNING HIS LESSON.

(From the Montgomery (Ala.) Journal.)
At last the farmer of the northwest is learning that he has a direct personal interest in cotton. He has been accustomed to think the cotton fields were too far away to affect him; that the plantations of the south were in another world too remote to interfere with his life; that the weal or woe of the cotton chopper was a matter of indifference to him. But crop restriction laws have presented a new picture. It is well illustrated in the case of the cattle and dairy industries.

Naturally, the south especially, has been utilizing the acres taken out of cotton and converted to pasture for expanding its dairy and livestock industry, and the more cattle produced in the south, the more restricted becomes the market of northern dairymen.

Unfortunately it requires a dent on the pocket-book to arouse the average American to a condition. Cattle raising and dairying in the south are going to make a tremendous change in the economy of the whole north and west. Restriction of cotton is pushing the south into the new industry whether it wants to go or not. Some day the Idaho farmer will see that it is not good business to buy a tariff-free jute bag in which to sack his potatoes, instead of buying a bag made of cotton.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

STRAW IN THE WIND WASHINGTON, May 10.—As a trivial but entertaining sign of the changeableness of this world, it's worth noting that "Sell-Em Ben" Smith is reported to have climbed aboard the bandwagon of Thomas E. Dewey. The celebrated speaker and reformer has been a nice addition to the group on any bandwagon, seeing that he always brings his check book along.

If the report is correct, moreover, New York's aspiring young gang-buster has a right to take heart and hope for the best. After all, "Sell-Em Ben" was one of the tiny but far-sighted band of Wall Streeters who leaped on the Roosevelt bandwagon back in 1923. Indeed, it was a few months ago that he journeyed to Washington with the satrap of the Brown Edward Flynn, seeking to be made ambassador to the Soviet Union with the help of Flynn and Providence.

After listening to Flynn's pleas, the President turned Smith down, but "Sell-Em Ben" is not the sort to desert a winner over a minor disappointment. If he is for Dewey now, he is for him before. He looks like a speaker and a reformer, and Roosevelt doesn't. And besides, any check "Sell-Em Ben" may write, it is understood there is plenty more wise money going Dewey's way. His campaign will surely be well-heeled.

THE POLL It would be foolish to argue with the wise money, and it must be admitted there are strong arguments on the money side. The first is the unfortunate showing made by Senator Robert A. Taft, Dewey's Republican rival, in his speech at the Gridiron dinner a few weeks ago. As the speech was unreported, its badness has no doubt been magnified by rumor, just as the badness of passages expurgated from a book is always magnified by the imagination. Nevertheless, Senator Taft's Gridiron speech and his strange attitude on the President for "ballyhooing" the desperate foreign situation have both greatly assisted Dewey.

Second, there is the recent Gallup poll, which shows Dewey leading the President by a 55-45 vote on the direct question, "If President Roosevelt runs for a third term in 1940 on the Democratic ticket against Thomas E. Dewey on the Republican ticket, which one do you think you would prefer?"

The Gallup poll is peculiarly important, since it had a definite place in the strategy of Dewey before his latest triumph. Back in the poll merely showed Dewey well out ahead of other contestants, one of his managers visited Washington and talked to several leading politicians here. The manager's story was that Dewey did not plan any delegate-hunting, public speaking or other normal activities of a candidate. He said that Dewey figured what the Republican party wanted was a man who could win, and was ready to let the polls to convince the party he was the man. The recent poll has not only given Dewey a tremendous leg-up in his own party, it has also scared the liver and lights out of the New Dealers, weakening the New Deal faith that the President, with his long experience, great following and vast prestige, could easily beat the young district attorney, Dewey.

GANG-BUSTER Of course, the fact remains that Dewey is only a district attorney of New York City, and he is not a gang-buster. Heigh-browed Democrats rather hopefully say that, no matter how bright Dewey's current prospects may be, he cannot keep his place in the public eye. The Dewey men answer this argument by predicting that, before long, Dewey will break at least two more cases almost as sensational as that against James J. Hines. At least this is the line the New Deal's chief patronage dispenser in New York City, the Hines case, will give Dewey splendid opportunities to use his talent as a gang-busting radio speaker.

Meanwhile, the Dewey views on all public questions remain every bit as mysterious as they have always been. Gang-busting was the theme of his gubernatorial campaign. His strategy of keeping quiet except when gang-busting promises no immediate revelation of his own mind, will break out, but he is an extremely shrewd and able man, he will probably speak out intelligently. But it is to be hoped that the speaking-out time will come pretty soon.

Propaganda
Both Ways.

I went to see that motion picture about which there has been so much comment, "Confessions of a Nazi Spy." It turned out to be a well-made motion picture, but, after all, just a picture.

The story, of course, is based upon the arrests and convictions, not so long ago, of four undercover agents for the German government, operating as spies in this country. You remember the news reports on the case. The picture, in so far as memory of those news stories goes, follows the broad outlines of the case rather closely. It may, of course, be true to fact in the details, too, but there is no way for the average man to know this.

It is well directed and well acted, with especially good performance by Paul Lukas and Edward G. Robinson.

It is a story with powerful punch and a real plot, with excellently portrayed characters. Its purpose is—emphatically it has a purpose—to inform Americans of the active espionage and propaganda carried on in this country by the Nazis. We have plenty of factual evidence that this kind of thing is going on. In the hands and in many camouflaged organizations which, hiding behind high-sounding titles of "Americanism" and "work like terms to undermine the principles of democracy and substitute Nazism."

But, after all, isn't such a picture itself subject to the label of propaganda?

The Weapon
Of Dictators.

The weapons of dictatorship in this modern age are, first, propaganda to sow dissension in the country attacked and, second, force or the threat of force to complete the disruption that propaganda started.

They are powerful and, as has been proven in Europe, effective weapons. But it seems to me the only way to combat them by the democracies is through the use of the same weapons, on the other side. And "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" is unquestionably propaganda. On our side, of course, and potentially very effective. But propaganda nevertheless.

Therefore it seems to me that Americans should guard against falling victims of their own weapons.

Grant that "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" is true. Well and good. It carries a warning, we all can well heed. But I hope it is not the forerunner of a flood of screen efforts to arouse emotions in this country and tempt us into wild enthusiasm on an issue that is, after all, not ours.

For the screen rarely appeals to the intelligence. Its efforts are achieved through emotionalism. It reaches, primarily, the people who are most susceptible to hysteria.

And it would be tragic if, despite the horrors and the disgusts of the Nazi, this nation should be so stirred with hatred for any other nation, even the Nazis, that emotionalism should get out of control.

We Need To Be Calm.

America needs today, more than anything else, calmness of public opinion. It is a time for judicial, unbiased thinking. To allow ourselves to become so stirred that we would condone participation in war, would be to play into the hands of the dictators. For, in war times, even our own democracy would be shelved—let us hope temporarily only—for a form of totalitarian government. It is essential to modern conflict.

I don't think there is any danger of the Nazis, even though it floods this nation, making much of an impression upon the 98 per cent of the people. They are too staunch in their loyalty to democracy. And I don't think there is any harm in seeing "Confessions of a Nazi Spy." Probably it will be good for us all.

But I do see a possible future danger if we are to meet enemy propaganda with a lot of emotion-stirring propaganda of our own. In short, propaganda is something disagreeable and awful, dangerous, to those who use it as well as those against whom it is directed.

And we must guard against falling victims to our own propaganda. We must not overdo it.

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

To Decline LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 10.—The Associated Press reports from Tallahassee that I have been subpoenaed by the Florida legislature to discuss the probability of Al Capone's return to Miami on his release from prison and the activities, meanwhile, of some of his old Chicago and Cicero colleagues in that happy land. This invitation has not been received to date and would be declined, anyway. The first phase of the subject is speculative, and the rest of it can be covered better by examination of Florida politicians, police, gamblers and race track operators and racketeers who are on the ground.

For a beginning the legislature need not go outside its own membership for witnesses, because Senator Ernest Graham, who is running the customary post-season crime-must-go-campaign, charges that many of his fellow-members have accepted graft from the horse and gambling promoters either in outright cash bribes or in the form of race track patronage—which is to say, jobs for themselves, their kin and their constituents. Armed though he is with authority to examine books, records and correspondence, the senator has merely puttered, and the record of his investigation reads like that of a sewing circle.

For one reason, he is a farmer, not a lawyer, and another reason could be the fact—which he admits—that he himself put in for his regular share of the race track jobs on behalf of his constituents.

Florida Is In most states a general charge of corruption by one member of the legislature, against others would be a serious matter, but Florida is different. The so-called small counties which run the state regard the Miami pleasure county as a sort of foreign settlement or de luxe slum. They derive big revenues for the mutual business of it and if hoodlums move in that is a local Miami headache.

As shown that backwoods or upstate statesmen chiseled private profit from the sinful pleasures of this alien spot, public opinion would be likely to admire rather than deplore.

The racing business, with its gambling ramifications extending over the country, seems to be heading up to a general delousing. The Department of Justice and the Treasury have taken an interest in the system by which bets are booked in every city and town of any size at all and by which, also, the odds are regulated at the track by the application of money pressure on the mutual machines. A sucker placing a bet with the sub-agent in the saloon or cigar store in Saugerties finds that part of his own money is dumped into the machines at the track to shorten the profit should he win.

Governing Racing is a gambling operation involving about a quarter of a billion dollars a year in the mutuels, aside from the poolrooms and bookies, and the status of a licensed vice. It enjoys the prestige of some first-class individual reputations, but is naturally full of guile, and the hoodlum racketeer, often is described in print as a sportsman by reporters who know better.

In Florida the racing lobby operates as openly as any other lobby in the legislature, and recently this licensed vice threatened to fold up, thus depriving the state of $2,000,000 a year in taxes if the legislature had the temerity to tamper with its privileges. From this it will be seen that a racket has grown so big and bold that it now presumes to govern the government of the state.

GOOD MORNING
By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

FRAGRANCE.

Just back from the annual Atlanta Rose Show, thinking of the beauty and the fragrance of that outspread picture of loveliness, I somehow find myself linking the memory of these roses with the forthcoming Mother's Day. Perhaps one of the reasons for this train of thought was the impression that came when we stood before the first-prize tray exhibit—a marvelous creation by the Rosemary Club—an antique tray, with an old, old Bible opened to John 3:16, an old, old pair of eyeglasses folded across the open Bible, a full blown moss rose in a tiny antique bowl, a cup and saucer of charming old pattern, a dish of raspberries, an exquisite napkin of needlework—a perfect picture for Mother.

On and on we strolled from table to table, looking at blue ribbons and red ribbons and gold ribbons—at new roses and old roses—climbing roses and bush roses—all the roses of all the colors. And the great banquet hall of the show, and near it the magnificent tel in which the show was arranged filled with a fragrance that will linger for many a happy day of memory. We looked at the proud and glorious Crimson Glory, awarded the first place for the show, and near it the magnificent tel in which the show was arranged filled with a fragrance that will linger for many a happy day of memory.

But somehow that tray lingers in my heart as the finest symbol of the rose show of 1939. I can't get away from it. What is it saying—this quiet, gentle picture—what is it saying? It speaks to me of mother—

The heart of the rose—her beauty, The color—her beauty rare, The fragrance—her lasting sweetness, Thorns—warnings given with care.

Mother's love like the petals unfolding, Make a rose fragrant and fair, A flower in God's Garden of beauty, Revealing His love everywhere.

Mother's Day: Roses! Fragrance! Gratitude too deep for words takes hold upon my heart, as I will take hold upon the heart of the nation these hours as we come on softly towards Mother's Day.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

THAT $200,000 "SAVING" The news of the past few days has given some very important evidence in support of a reorganization of government.

If there are those interested, the statement by assistant state superintendent of schools, M. E. Thompson, before the economy committee, is of most importance.

Mr. Thompson, at the request of the committee, had made a state-wide survey. He reported that savings of $210,290 might be effected "within two to five years." Six hundred and forty-seven teachers would lose their jobs; 294 schools would close.

That is of public interest. It would be important if it meant anything. It means nothing at all, except that government needs reorganization.

There will be no saving of money. There won't be any saving because the very excellent school board has no power to effect the necessary consolidation of schools. It is not empowered to act.

The counties have charge of their school systems. The counties must close schools and consolidate others. Mr. Thompson believes it would require from two to five years to effect the change. This would be the necessary time if the counties would agree. There is no real chance they will.

This is but one of many reports which the economy committee has heard which cannot be done by the state, by the board directly concerned, or by the Governor.

There is vital need of reorganization of government to meet conditions of the present era with its increased services by the states, cities and counties.

"THE PUBLIC WELFARE" There now is a renewed agitation to reduce the number of counties in the state. The counties resist this on the basis they want to retain their identity.

A county name never yet set up a health department; never yet cured a case of malaria or hookworm. Independence is a very fine quality. Yet county "rights" cease to be rights if they merely are the rights to have more hookworm, more malaria, poor services, more worn-out farms, and poor schools. They are very poor "rights."

The legislators from the various counties represent those counties. Therefore they say they could never urge the consolidation of their counties because they themselves might not be elected when new voters were added; and also that their counties would lose their separate identities.

These arguments, even if true, are specious but unworthy. It is true they represent the people of their counties. But in a broader and truer sense they represent Georgia. If it is better for the state of Georgia to have fewer counties and less government, then they have a higher duty.

The argument against the cities is no good. The claim that the cities have drained away the wealth and the population of some counties, is not a sound argument against county consolidation. The claim is, in a large sense, true. Yet the immediate question is, "Why did the cities get this excess population which is giving the cities concern and bringing about acute financial problems? Is it not because the counties which lost them could not offer enough to keep them? One may be sure that Atlanta, Savannah, Macon, Columbus and the other cities have many residents who have come in unprepared for jobs which may exist; knowing only farming, a little of that; who become members of the growing numbers on "relief."

Fulton county pays about 25 cents of each tax dollar for relief. Fulton county is not happy about it.

Not many weeks ago a Georgia marble company submitted a bid for a large project which was $25,000 under the rival bid. There was no question of the quality of the Georgia marble. Indeed, it was admitted to be superior.

Yet the work was awarded, airy, to another company, presumably on the grounds of politics and on the basis a few thousand difference in price didn't matter. What, after all, seemed to be the attitude, is a contemptible $25,000.

A Georgia county mentioned about as saying he did not believe it advisable and added it would save "only a few thousand dollars." One might ask if there is any objection to saving a few thousand dollars?

One of the terms in the New Deal structure has been this careless attitude toward money. Money was tossed around without any regard for economy. Public spending waste has cost the New Deal more than any other one factor. Second on that list would come the appointees who are arrogant and high-handed in their public relations, making enemies instead of friends of people who would be friends.

If "a few thousand" dollars could be saved in every county and state; and if a few millions could be saved in federal projects, the sum total might be astounding.

If He Pays For a Dozen Eggs and Gets Twenty, Somebody Is Playing Santa Claus

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

When we make stump speeches at one another concerning our rights and deserts, we are like the old mountaineer who said to his lawyer: "Quit sayin' so much about jestic; what I want is mercy." We aren't interested in our deserts, but only in our desires.

When we repeat the ancient truth that a man must reap what he sows, we are thinking only of his sins. Yet the same inexorable law applies to economic sins as well.

In strict justice, we are entitled to receive what we have earned and deserved—and nothing more. If we get more, it is the fruit of luck or the benevolence of our fellow men. We reap where we did not sow.

In this land of many races, the equality of which we boast is not equality have justice the absence of special privilege, and equal right to obtain what we rightly deserve.

If the spokesman for a racial group from Tibet claims an equal share in the country's rewards and blessings, let him be asked the question: "Did your people contribute, in proportion to their numbers, to the building of this civilization? Could they alone build or maintain a civilization equal to this?"

He may answer: "Yes, we furnished our share of the skilled workers, the engineers, the scientists, the inventors, the managers, the educators and artists. And we alone could preserve this civilization as it is."

Then he and his people have earned and deserved a full share in all that our country has to give.

But if they did not and could not build such a civilization, they are reaping where they did not sow, and what they receive is not their deserts but a gift and a benevolence from their fellow men. So it is with the individual. He may

Savings by Schools Consolidation Cited

Inquiry Report Outlines Plan Eliminating 647 Teachers, 294 Units at $210,000 Yearly Cost.

County school consolidations, when and if effected, would eliminate 647 teachers in 294 schools and save the state about $210,000 annually, Dr. M. E. Thompson, assistant superintendent of schools, told the house economy committee yesterday.

Dr. Thompson said he was merely reporting the findings of an investigation conducted by the board of education through its supervisors at the request of the economy committee, most of which was outlined in The Constitution yesterday.

"The total savings would include cost of transportation of the pupils in the consolidated schools as well as some books," the educator said. He pointed out that the State Board of Education does not now have the authority to make consolidations and legislation would be necessary if the economy committee desires that the program shall be carried into effect.

Plan to Take 2 to 5 Years.
All of the schools listed are in sparsely settled sections of the state and average less than three teachers to a school, Dr. Thompson said.

The committee was informed the school board feels that it would take from two to five years to work out the total program, but Dr. Thompson added that, in his belief, many of the consolidations could be made during the next school term. Consolidations at present are a function of county school boards, and many county boards have been reluctant to put them into effect, although in still many other sections consolidations are being made from year to year.

Questioned by Chairman Wilmer D. Lanier, of the committee, Thompson said the state schools now employed about 21,000 teachers for about 782,000 pupils. The assistant superintendent said that no consolidations could be effected in Fulton and DeKalb counties where several units already have been consolidated.

Amendment in School Law.
He estimated an additional $100,000 annually could be saved by amendment of the state seven-month school law to require separate reports of daily average attendance in white and negro schools. Teachers are assigned on a basis of pupil enrollment, but in some counties, Thompson said, systems which cannot use their full quota of negro teachers divert

School Group To Present Roosevelt With State Flag

Dr. M. D. Collins, left, state superintendent of schools, presented a Georgia flag to the Misses Frances Ravenel and Anne Roberts, of Savannah, as 250 Georgia high school students left yesterday for a Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis sightseeing trip. The flag will be presented to President Roosevelt tomorrow as a gift from the Georgia school group.

High School Students To Visit First Lady, Ace G-Man, Senators

Delegation of 250 To Present State Flag to Chief Executive, Receive Newly-Minted Pennies, Tour Naval Academy at Annapolis.

Two hundred and fifty Georgia high schools students left yesterday for Washington, with appointments already made to meet Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, J. Edgar Hoover, and Georgia's two senators.

Led by Mrs. Boyce Ficklen, of Washington, who called the group a "Youth Pilgrimage," they took over the Terminal station for half an hour before train time. While the Tech High band played, Dr. M. D. Collins, state school superintendent, presented a silk Georgia flag to Frances Ravenel and Anne Roberts, of Pape school, Savannah, who will in turn present the flag to President Roosevelt tomorrow afternoon.

Meet First Lady.

While the President is receiving the flag, Mrs. Roosevelt will meet the rest of the group.

Arriving in Washington this morning, the party will meet Hoover, will be shown the FBI offices, and later hear Senator Russell make a plea for peace in Arlington National cemetery. Tomorrow, they will visit the White House, be introduced to the Georgia delegation in the Capitol by Senator George and be given newly-minted pennies by Mrs. Glenn Bannister, assistant United States treasurer. While at the Capitol, Vernon Boatner, of Athens, will present Vice President Garner with a gavel made of wood from the home of Dr. Crawford W. Long. After a tour of the Naval Academy at Annapolis, the party will leave for home.

Schools Represented.
Students of the following schools are making the trip: Joe Brown, Murphy, Commercial and Girls' High, Atlanta; Pape school, Savannah; McPhail school, Sylves-

Relief Funds Used To Raise Value Of Politicians' Properties Charged

Special Investigator Tells House Committee Federal Funds Spent in Tennessee To Enhance Worth of Real Estate Owned by Prominent Figures.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP)—A statement that thousands of dollars of federal relief money had been spent in Tennessee to enhance the value of property owned by politically prominent persons was laid before a house investigating committee today.

Harry S. Barger, special investigator, told the committee the statement had been made by Eugene R. Kuhne, fish technician for the state fish and game commission.

It said lakes had been built primarily to increase the value of adjacent lands.

Listed as the owners of such lakes, or persons who would benefit from their increased value, were Governor Prentice Cooper, former Senator George L. Berry, Colonel Claude Reeder, Marshall Priest, former state comptroller; John Harton, state treasurer; the C. M. Wrenne Realty Company, Nashville, Tenn., and the "Sumner county clerk and master and county court clerk."

In each instance, according to the story attributed to Kuhne, the state had been deeded the actual reservoir site and a strip of land 100 feet wide around it. This strip would barely accommodate a road and did not permit construction of

BOLIVIA, GERMANY MAKE BARTER DEAL
Raw Material Exchanged for Nazi Manufactures.

LA PAZ, Bolivia, May 10.—(AP)—Bolivia has arranged for the barter of oil and other raw materials for 4,000,000 marks of German manufactures, Minister of Mines Dionisio Foyanini announced today.

Foyanini said Bolivia, "since August, 1938, had been negotiating for compensation mark credits with various German firms through the credit Anschaff in exchange for Bolivian minerals, hides and some petroleum. On February 2, 1939, Bolivia was granted the credit of 4,000,000 marks."

STATE'S RESOURCES TO BE EMPHASIZED

'Georgia Products Week' Observance Will Begin Next Monday.

Designed to attract attention of residents of Georgia to the agricultural, industrial and mineral resources of the state, "Georgia Products Week" will be observed in Atlanta and throughout the state next week, beginning Monday.

The Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs, under the direction of Mrs. James R. Little, president, has prepared a program which will emphasize the use of Georgia food products on every possible occasion. Posters calling attention to the observance have been sold by the federation, while clubwomen in other cities of the state will cooperate with merchants, chambers of commerce and business firms in displaying products of the state during the six days the program will be in force.

The "week" has received the official endorsement of Governor Rivers who has issued a proclamation calling attention to the period and urging residents of the state to continue the use of Georgia products during the remaining weeks of the year.

As a feature of the observance, The Constitution will publish a special "Georgia Products" edition Sunday. The issue will contain stories and pictures dealing with the agricultural products in various counties in the state, as well as the industrial advantages and mineral resources possessed by Georgia counties.

MOVE TO APPROVE 2D REFORM ORDER

Bill of Disapproval Offered Then Voted Against by Its Sponsors.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP)—Senator Byrnes, Democrat, South Carolina, made a preliminary move today to clinch victory for President Roosevelt's second government reorganization plan and speed it into operation.

Byrnes succeeded in having the senate reorganization committee approve the plan. Then he prepared to call up in the senate, at the first opportunity, a resolution which would notify the administration, in effect, that it could proceed with its program.

After that, he intended to introduce a second measure under which the reorganization order would become effective after 30, instead of 60 days. The reorganization law under which Mr. Roosevelt acted specifies that a reorganization plan becomes effective unless disapproved by both branches of congress within 60 days, or unless congress meanwhile adjourns. Thus favorable action by a single branch clinches the plan unless congress adjourns during the 60-day period. Moving to obtain such favorable action, Byrnes introduced a resolution of disapproval, had it referred to the reorganization committee and then voted, with all members of the group but one, against his own resolution.

Handling Cash Is Feminine Instinct, Woman Banker for 28 Years Says

'Scout' for Miami Bank Visits Atlanta, Asserts Eyes of U. S. on City.

By YOLANDE GWIN.

Money may come in the front door, but the greatest percentage goes out of the kitchen door.

That's on the authority of Miss Mildred Romfh, of the First National Bank of Miami. In Atlanta yesterday, the woman banker official said:

"Women spend the money and are familiar with the latest buying methods, whether it's going to the market with basket in hand, or various business ventures. A woman spends money and gets value received. Gone are the days when a woman couldn't balance her bank book. She knows values now, whether it's on the counter or on paper."

Miss Romfh went to work in the Miami bank 28 years ago because the job offered her a good salary. She has seen life from all windows of the banking business, and knows her job from the runners' beat to that of the vice president. She is now a bank scout, touring states and cities to get first-hand information on methods used and obtain a comprehensive and detailed record of the business. She declared:

"I did not enter the banking business with any idea that it would prove to be an interesting and thrilling career for me. I have been amazed at the number of women working in the Atlanta banks. It seems perfectly natural for a woman to be working in the bank, because from instinct she knows how to handle money and balance books. It's a domestic trick that all women have to learn. Some of them are making it pay them dividends in the success of their jobs."

Because of ill health Miss Romfh has been forced to give up most of her work in the bank. Her principal duties now are "scouting." Her brother, Edward C. Romfh is president of the Miami bank.

"The eyes of the nation are on Atlanta," she said. "One of the many reasons is because of the resources in the city. As an example of the times, look at the women. They are the barometer of the nation. They vary in sections of the country, but their ideas, although different, in combination, result in the success of life and business."

THE CASE OF MR. X, WHO WANTS TO KILL

murder. At Milledgeville, he is a deft solver of cross-word puzzles, an invincible champion on debatable topics, but he must never again be permitted in the vicinity of Mrs. X or in the environment which sets his mind off at wiled tangents, which he regrets but cannot control.

In Milledgeville there are numbers of men, and women, like Mr. X—sane down there in the asylum, but potential murderers if they step outside those asylum walls. Their desire to murder, however, is directed toward only one person.

They'll Never Leave. Those patients will never be permitted to leave Milledgeville. They are closely guarded as they round out their allotted span of life.

To the untutored average citizen, anyone afflicted with mental disturbances embodies all that is violent in Mr. X. The average citizen, from the lofty heights of sanity he attributes to himself, views all fellow men, whose brain tissues lack his own sturdy qualities, as potential murderers, menaces to the community, a burden on society.

Down at the State Hospital for the Insane, however, there are literally hundreds of unfortunates

Dry, Cool Weather Slows Corn, Cotton

Dry cool weather was described as a handicap for cotton and corn in a federal weather bureau report on Georgia crops for the week ending Tuesday. Conditions generally were deemed satisfactory.

Wheat harvesting was in progress in the central section.

A shortage of soil moisture until Monday was cited in the case of potatoes. Tobacco's growth and condition were reported generally good, "but would have been better with warmer weather."

Peach growth was rapid, the bureau said.

whose actual mental condition contradicts this popular fallacy.

Nineteen doctors comprise the medical staff at the state hospital and not only they, but all other doctors who practice psychiatry will agree that there are thousands of men and women abroad on the streets of the average American city harboring far more dangerous thoughts than most of those deposited in the asylum by fearful relatives and abandoned to the care of the state throughout their lifetime.

Relatives Abandon. Says Dr. Y. H. Yarbrough, assistant superintendent:

"There are men and women here who could have been taken home by their relatives years ago, when their relatives don't want them, won't have them. We have been forced to keep them. It is now we are trying to get rid of now."

Hospital officials, consequently, have gone to work to audit the human population at the state hospital, under the power invested in them by Section 35-206, Code of 1933. This law instructs the board of the state hospital to return to his home or to the county from which he was committed any patient sufficiently recovered to be no longer a menace to life. This is the first time this section of the Georgia code has been invoked, and it is necessary today, say prison officials, in view of the state's inability to care for more than 1,000 patients on an appropriation which is only 55 per cent of what should be provided to care for the hospital's normal capacity of 5,000 patients.

Writing to Relatives. The 19 doctors on the medical staff are carefully studying each patient, his history, his condition, his chances for the future. To relatives of those who no longer need the care of the hospital, a letter is addressed:

"The name of (your relative) appears among the group of patients that have been certified to me by the medical staff as being harmless and inoffensive. "Due to the serious financial situation confronting the institution, the board has directed that all patients of the harmless and inoffensive type be removed. We are therefore requesting that you make immediate arrangements for (your relative's) removal."

"We much prefer that these patients be placed with their relatives, but in instances where the relatives do not see fit to remove them after having been requested to do so, there is nothing left for us to do except remand them to the counties from which they were committed, according to section 35-206, code of 1933.

"Unless (your relative) is removed within the next few days, it will be necessary for us to remand (your relative) to (your) county, as stated above.

"Very truly yours,
"JOHN W. ODEB, "Superintendent."

A copy of each letter is sent to the ordinary of the county from which the patient was committed, and if nothing is heard from relatives the ordinary is notified to come after his charge.

As Fast As Possible. The problems of relatives and the counties involved are being considered by the hospital board just now before the patient is sent back. No patient is being dumped out of the hospital on a world unable to care for him. But the work of ridding the hospital of all unnecessary guests is progressing as rapidly as Dr. Oden's office force can accomplish it.

No Mr. X of murderous impulses is being turned out of Milledgeville. No patient who shows promise of improvement under continued treatment is being turned out. All efforts are directed toward depopulating the hospital of all those who are not strictly insane but merely are persons who lost control of their brains in an emotional upset and are today paralyzed mentally as others, stricken by other diseases, have been paralyzed physically. Those persons, hospital officials believe, can be cared for by their own relatives as effectively as they can be cared for by a state hospital, which is denying entrance to others who are actually insane and are entitled to treatment denied them because the state hospital's accommodations are overcrowded.

The type of patient being discharged is known as the "type" and requiring custodial care. Any relative or servant in the patient's family could perform the services the hospital staff performs today, a simple, though annoying, task of bodily care for one unable to care for himself.

(Tomorrow's installment will describe the work done among the hospital's patients and explain how many are restored to normal health.)

Relieve Agony Of Itching Skin

Don't scratch and claw itching skin. This tends to irritate and spread inflammation, and is dangerous. Skin itching, when due to Scabies, Eczema, Ringworm, Athlete's Foot, Sunburn, Rash, Insect bites, hives, is soothed by applying Tetterine, a quickly palliative preparation that acts with surprising speed to kill every parasite it contacts and your itching goes galloping away. Atlanta Girl To Wed Young Hollywood Star

This was the first Hollywood picture made of Atlanta's Catherine Dittig when she went to the film colony in the spring of 1938 to appear in a picture with Deanna Durbin. Yesterday she was reported seeking license to wed Leo Gorcey, 21, one of the famed "Dead End Kids." Catherine's movie name is Catherine Marvis. She is 17.

ACTOR WILL MARRY FORMER ATLANTAN

Dead End Kid Will Take Catherine Dittig as Bride.

A graduate of Atlanta Kiddie Revues, who went to Hollywood, is going to take one of the Dead End Kids for better or for worse. She's Catherine Dittig, dancing star of the Revues who went west two years ago to appear in one of Deanna Durbin's pictures.

Catherine is not afraid of anything. She proved that in her pick of her one and only, Leo Gorcey is the bridegroom-to-be and he has the reputation around Warner Brothers' film lot of being the toughest of the tough Dead End Kids.

Word was received in Atlanta yesterday of the intended marriage of Catherine Marvis, 17, and Leo Gorcey, 21. Marvis is Catherine's screen name. Her occupation was given as a dramatic school student. She has resided in Hollywood with her mother since going to California. Her father, P. J. Dittig, is connected with a local candy concern.

Smart to See— Smarter to Buy!

The model illustrated is the Buick Special model 41 four-door touring sedan $996 delivered at Flint, Mich.*

NOBODY has to tell you, skimming along at that brisk Buick pace, that plenty of eyes are turning your direction!

It's a smart car to see, all right—but you're discovering there behind the wheel is how much more there is to this beauty than a look or two will uncover!

You're feeling the eager power that a straight-eight can pour—when it's a Dynaflex eight with a cyclone in each cylinder to give life, lift—and thrust—to every smooth-flowing mile!

You're finding out that bumps can be tamed, that car riding can be level as flying—when all four wheels, not just the front, ride on stout coiled springs of soft and cushiony steel!

You're discovering how pleasant it is to look out through windows enlarged as much as 412 square inches. And you're enjoying that very special Buick "feel," firm and taut and steady, nowhere any skittery looseness, or wind wander, or hunt!

In a word, you're beginning to realize that, smart as it is to see, this Buick's even smarter to buy.

Smarter for the extra contentment you'll get from owning it—smarter even if you had to pay a premium to get it.

But you don't have to pay a premium! Instead, this great-eight beauty is today priced lower than some sixes. Costs are below those of a year ago. Total outlay—counting included equipment you'd pay extra for elsewhere—is often less than for some cars with lower advertised prices.

So what to do? Easy! Simply turn around, head for the showroom, get down to the details of trade-in terms, monthly payments, all that!

Even there you'll find your Buick dealer ready, willing, eager to serve—just like the good and gallant car he sells!

305-MILLION FUND ON FLOOD CONTROL FAVORED BY HOUSE

G. O. P. Strategy Defers Vote on Final Passage Amid Cries of 'Pork Barrel, Spendthrift.'

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP)—Amid cries of "pork barrel" and "spendthrift," the house went on record today in favor of a $305,188,514 appropriation, mostly for flood control and river and harbor improvements, but a last-minute Republican strategy deferred final action until next week.

Overriding the objections of Majority Leader Rayburn, Democrat, Texas, and leading members of its appropriations committee, the house added $50,000,000 for flood control and river and harbor projects to the original budget estimates. Proponents of the increase said an equal amount would be deducted from next year's relief fund inasmuch as President Roosevelt already had agreed to allocate that amount for such projects.

Vote Deferred.
Just as the vote on final passage was to be taken, however, Representative Schafer, Republican, Wisconsin, demanded that an engrossed copy of the bill be read. It would have taken hours to prepare such a copy so the house adjourned without taking final action. Rayburn said the vote would have to be deferred until Monday because he had promised many members who planned to leave the city that no bills would be voted on during the rest of this week.

Bill Outlined.
In its present form, the bill would provide $172,000,000 for flood control, $39,000,000 of which would be devoted to the Mississippi river, and $98,000,000 for river and harbor improvements. It also carried $24,774,924 to bolster the defenses of the Panama Canal and for its maintenance and operation; $7,000,000 for continuing the installation of a power plant at the Bonneville, Oregon, dam and $2,000,000 for a similar purpose at the Fort Peck, Mont., dam.

A furious floor fight developed over addition of the $50,000,000 to the bill.

Film Shows Czech Crisis After Munich

"Crisis," a factual picture story of the Czech nation after the Munich treaty, opens today at the Rialto theater for a week's run. The commentary is by Vincent Sheean and the photography by A. Hackenschmidt.

Dixie Dunbar and Shirley Ross To Appear on Roxy, Capitol Stages

Pictures Opening Today Are 'Crisis' at Rialto, 'Midnight' at Fox; Grand, Paramount, Rhodes To Offer New Screen Attractions Tomorrow.

By LEE ROGERS, Motion Picture Editor.

Shirley Ross, screen singing star, and Dixie Dunbar, stage dancing star, top the stage "in person" attractions at the Atlanta theaters for the coming week. Shirley will perform, opening tomorrow at the Capitol; Dixie opens today at the Roxy.

Screen attractions include: "Crisis" at the Rialto, and "Midnight" at the Fox, both open today, and "Sergeant Madden" at the Grand; "Hound of the Baskervilles" at the Paramount, and "Let Freedom Ring," which moves from the Grand to the Rhodes, open tomorrow.

Theater managers describe attractions for the week:

ROXYETTES TO GIVE FAREWELL PERFORMANCE

Today ushers in "Farewell Week" at the Roxy theater. Next week the Roxyettes will pack their bags and depart for a vacation.

Before they go they will offer two new routines to mark their "farewell" show and bring back their sensational "ball number" wherein they dance on large wooden spheres.

Although it is "Farewell Week" the new show says "Welcome Home" to one of Atlanta's most popular personalities, pert and pretty Dixie Dunbar, who comes back home to reign at the Roxy for a week.

She will be assisted by Jimmie Brynes in a dance act especially produced to suit the versatile talents of this Georgia miss. Still another young Atlanta will grace this show, Miss "Chic" Kennedy, blonde beauty and singer of strange songs, makes her first trip home since she claimed the pianola laurels. Jeanne Lorraine and Roy Rogan are a duo of funmakers, while Terri Franconi, romantic Latin tenor, will bring his international program of love songs.

On the screen is "Boy Slaves," a stirring tale of stark realism the heroine, where boys are sent in penal servitude. Strangely enough, pretty Anne Shirley heads the cast mainly composed of clever young male actors.

"CRISIS" PORTRAYS CZECH SITUATION

"Crisis" the film that tells the dramatic story of the destruction of the Czech-Slovakian nation by Germany in 1938, opens today at the Rialto.

It wasn't necessary for this film to follow the usual procedure of providing a dramatic fiction story to tell the tale. Nothing more enthralling or dramatic could be imagined than the screen version of the events in the little nation while the Reich was preparing to pounce upon it.

The scenes deal with the life of Czechoslovakia before and after Munich. They portray the ideals of the people and of the government, the prosperity and happiness throughout the land. They show the crooked, underground methods used by the Nazis in Sudetenland as they sowed their seeds of death, preparing for the day of "anschluss."

The picture reveals that the Czechs had a magnificent little army, prepared to sacrifice itself as the vanguard of armed resistance to the force of Hitler. But they believed that France, Britain and, possibly, Russia would come to their aid and that their sacrifice thus would not be in vain. When the news came from Munich, the tragedy of a betrayed people is written in the expression on their faces, for all to read, as the film unrolls. There is running comment, through the film, from American newspaper observers who were in Prague throughout the crisis.

"MIDNIGHT" TO OPEN AT FOX THEATER

A star-studded cast, a witty story tailored to fit Claudette Colbert's unique personality and the clever direction of Mitchell Leisen, combine to make the screen comedy "Midnight," opening today at the Fox theater.

In addition to Miss Colbert the picture presents Don Ameche, John Barrymore, Francis Lederer, Mary Astor, Hedda Hopper and Rex O'Malley. There is also Elaine marries Curtis, Laraine Day comes through with flying colors in this, her first important featured part, auguring well for a memorable career to come. She is sensitive, clear-cut and convincing even to her Irish brogue.

Outstanding in supporting roles are Fay Holden, Tom Brown, Marc Lawrence, David Gorcey, Marion Martin and Donald Haines.

"LET FREEDOM RING" STARS NELSON EDDY

Lusty outdoor drama of the pioneer west, "Let Freedom Ring," which starts tomorrow at the Rhodes theater, presents Nelson Eddy in his most virile characterization to date, surrounding him with a cast of veterans who, despite their formidable reputations, are hard put to it to match the sterling work of the singing star.

In his singing, his acting and his climactic fist-fight with Victor McLaglen, Eddy sets a new high standard for himself, the role of the young Harvard law graduate of the 1860's who must resort to trickery to win a battle against unscrupulous railroad interests being not only made to measure for his talents but offering him a scope hitherto untouched.

Lionel Barrymore, Virginia Bruce, Guy Kibbee, and H. B. Warner are in the cast.

The songs of the picture offer a wide variety, among them "Dusty Road," "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," "My Country 'Tis of Thee" and "Love's Serenade."

NAZI ESPIONAGE IS FILM'S THEME

"Confessions of a Nazi Spy," the Warner Brothers' film dealing with Nazi espionage activities in this country, is scheduled by the Fox theater for its midnight offering Saturday.

This is the much-awaited film which has been a subject of wide interest ever since Warner Brothers started the production of it, the first really important motion picture document of Nazi espionage activities in America.

MAN SLAYS WOMAN AND ENDS OWN LIFE

Suicide Follows Fatal Tussle Over Gun Near West Point.

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. WEST POINT, Ga., May 10.—Billy Hogg, 35, and his own life with a shotgun last night at his home one mile from West Point, after shooting his sister-in-law, Miss Mary Hill, 26, to death, in a tussle over the weapon, Police Chief Reed Mobley said today.

Chief Mobley said Hogg's 15-year-old son witnessed the shooting of his aunt. The father sent his son for medical aid, and as the doctor drove into the yard he heard the report of a gunshot. Entering, he found Billy Hogg dying. Troup County Coroner Ed E. Edmondson and a jury returned a verdict of suicide in Hogg's death, and death by accident in the case of Miss Hill.

Chief Mobley said Hogg became involved in a quarrel with his sister-in-law, who was keeping house for him and his six children. Fight for both will be held Thursday.

BEERY PORTRAYS "SERGEANT MADDEN"

A story of the New York police and of a father who put a halt to the criminal activities of his own son, "Sergeant Madden," comes to Loew's Grand theater tomorrow. Wallace Beery has the title role.

As Sergeant Madden, 30-year veteran of the force, soft-hearted, plodding and idealistic, Beery epitomizes the finest traits of "New York's Finest." He is the cop on the beat to the minutest detail. And as the father who tracks down the son whom he has failed to impress with the traditions and ideals of the job, Beery is magnificent.

Alan Curtis as the son who tries a short cut to promotion and finally is forced to turn bank robber, plays a meaty role.

The terms of the formula which was being debated about the conference table here in New York were not disclosed, but it was understood simply to propose the re-

Pressure Cited.

Roosevelt administration pressure for an armistice had reached proportions seldom paralleled, with both the President and Secretary of Labor Perkins having spoken out imperatively against the long shutdown and its twin serious consequences: "The progressive fuel shortage and mounting unemployment."

Illustrating the extent to which Mr. Roosevelt had expressed his concern, one of the negotiators shook his head as he entered the conference room and, insisting that he remain anonymous, remarked:

"The President sure put the heat on us yesterday."

The issue remained substantially what it had been for weeks: The demand of the miners for what John L. Lewis, head of the UMW and of the CIO, terms the "union shop" and what operators call "the closed shop."

The coal shortage in New York city, where already subway service has been reduced materially, led Chairman Milo Malbrie of the state public service commission to direct two of the largest utilities serving the 9,000,000 residents of the metropolitan area—the Consolidated and Staten Island Edison Companies—to submit to the commission Friday plans for possible curtailment of service.

At a hearing before Malbrie to determine the amount of available coal for generating electricity and manufacturing gas, supplies were estimated by executives generally to be sufficient for about eight weeks. Officers of two companies—the Consolidated Edison and Long Island Lighting Company—said they were preparing to turn to oil.

F. D. R. DENOUNCES REGIMENTATION AS SCOURGE OF ARTS

Says They 'Can't Thrive Except Where Men Are Free To Be Themselves,' in Dedicating Museum.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(UP)—President Roosevelt condemned the totalitarian type of human regimentation tonight in a nationwide radio address dedicating the new building of the Museum of Modern Art, New York city.

Without naming any of the dictator nations, the chief executive obviously pointed his remarks at them with the declaration that "a world turned into a stereotype, a society converted into a regiment, a life translated into a routine, make it difficult for either art or artists to survive."

Enrich, invigorate. The speech climaxed a series dedicating the museum which he characterized as an institution which "can enrich and invigorate our cultural life by bringing the best of the modern art to all of the American people."

"The arts cannot thrive except where men are free to be themselves and to be in charge of the discipline of their own energies and ardors," he declared. "The conditions for democracy and for art are one and the same. What we call liberty in politics results in freedom of the arts. There can be no vitality in the works gathered in a museum unless there exists the right of spontaneous life in the society in which the arts are nourished."

Then, in the same vein, he indirectly called attention to war threats abroad with the assertion that "the arts that ennoble and refine life flourish only in the atmosphere of peace."

"And in this hour of dedication," he continued, "we are glad again to bear witness before all the world to our faith in the sanctity of free institutions. For we know that only where men are free can the arts flourish and the civilization of national culture reach full flower."

Crush individuality, he observed, and you crush art as well; nourish the conditions of a free life and you nourish the arts, too.

THE ROMANCE OF THE IRON HORSE

Seventy years ago this week, the American continent was first spanned by a trans-continental railroad. The absorbing story of the development of the railroad in America from its crude beginnings on rails, down to the latest stream-lined marvel is interesting.

Friends Tell Rivers Richard Gallogly Needs Constant Medical Attention

Pleading that he is ill and in need of constant medical attention, friends and relatives of Richard G. Gallogly yesterday laid a plea for executive clemency for the young Atlantan before Governor Rivers and the State Pardon and Parole Board.

Gallogly is serving life for alleged participation in two holdup slayings. He has served more than 10 years. In the above photo is shown a group of those sponsoring the clemency application. From left to right they are Editor W. T. Anderson, of friends of the slain drug clerk, some of whom presumably will be introduced today.

the Macon Telegraph; Inman Gray, Gallogly's uncle; Mrs. W. E. Yankey, the youth's mother; Mrs. James R. Gray, Gallogly's grandmother; Mrs. Inman Gray and Miss Vera Hunt, of Milledgeville, close friend of the young Atlantan.

Flanice Present. Present also were Colonel James A. Gallogly, of Miami, father of Richard Gallogly; Mrs. Frances Gray Yankey, of Atlanta, his mother; Miss Vera Hunt, his fiancée, in addition to other relatives.

State Senator Susie T. Moore, of Tifton, referred to Miss Hunt in pleading with the Governor that "justice be tempered with mercy" in consideration of Gallogly's appeal. Solicitor General Boykin had said, however, that he did not know the Smith slaying was generally referred to as a "thrill" murder.

"I don't know about that," she responded, "but there is no telling what youth will do. I do know that he (Gallogly) has the love of this beautiful woman and that can mean more than all else combined."

Says Talmadge Cried. Senator Moore, a stout, gray-haired woman, said she had made a similar appeal to Eugene Talmadge when he was Governor and that he broke down crying and said:

"That boy ought to have a parole but the Atlanta Journal has said so much about pardon racks that I just can't do it. I hope my successor will."

Among hundreds of letters Attorney Dyer placed into the records were a dozen or more from Georgia newspaper editors and publishers. Henry H. Revell, of Greenville, wrote that he formerly had opposed clemency for Gallogly but that upon being convinced that the case had been made a "football in politics" he had changed his mind and now favored it.

Major Clark Howell, editor and publisher of The Atlanta Constitution, summed up the plea for impartial consideration in a statement, saying:

"I hope this young man will neither be helped nor hindered by the fact that he comes from a family purportedly rich and of political influence."

Offer to Show Expenses. W. T. Anderson, publisher of the Macon Telegraph and News, announced at the hearing that in order to dispell any suspicion of "unclean" money being exchanged in the case members of the family had agreed to furnish him for publication a complete list of all counsel fees and all other expenses and payments. At the suggestion of Governor Rivers this statement would begin with the Fulton county court trials and include two former clemency appeals.

In commenting on Anderson's announcement, Attorney Dyer said there had been "rumors going about that these people are wealthy and will have to pay a lot of money to get this boy out."

Nearly a dozen boyhood friends and later acquaintances of Gallogly were introduced as character witnesses. They said he was a well-bred, gentlemanly youth with no "vicious" traits and they felt he had paid amply for any guilt in the Smith murder.

Say Life Jeopardized. Physicians testified prison life had broken the health of Gallogly, who is now a patient at an Atlanta hospital, and unless he was set free his life would be jeopardized.

Dr. Calhoun McDougall, of Atlanta, said that in addition to respiratory and cardiac systems described by other doctors a serious sinus infection had developed presumably from a blow on the nose.

Inman Gray, uncle of Gallogly, said that he understood the nose injury was received in an automobile accident while Gallogly was helping Effingham county guards recapture escaped prisoners.

Ivan Allen Sr. Backs New Drive To Consolidate Georgia Counties

Businessman Says Reducing Number to 40 Would Save About $11,000,000 Annually; He Wouldn't Destroy Boundaries.

By JACK SPALDING. Ivan Allen Sr. yesterday strongly endorsed the county consolidation movement revived this week by the Atlanta Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Allen, one of Atlanta's active businessmen, gives much thought to his hobbies, and makes an outstanding success of them. Better government long has been a hobby of his.

He has been working toward the end sought by the Junior Chamber for more than 10 years, and despite little outward progress, still has hopes of seeing Georgia better governed by less than half the present number of officials.

Reducing the number of counties to 40 or so would save Georgia more than $11,000,000 a year, Allen said, enough money to carry on the state's badly strapped social service program.

What Allen Found Out. Back in 1930, before Campbell and Milton counties were merged with Fulton, and taxpayers were supporting 161 sets of office holders instead of 159, Allen compiled such data as was then available on the counties.

Of the 161, he concluded, 103 didn't have enough taxable property to support the county government properly. Since then, he pointed out, homestead and tax exemptions have increased that number considerably.

The size of counties was established on a basis of time—the outer boundaries usually two hours or so from the courthouse by horse and buggy. Today, in two hours, he commented, you can drive through more counties than you would care about paying taxes in.

Hinge Size on Value. A county's size, he thinks, should be determined by tax value now, not by how long it took a farmer to get to the courthouse in an oxcart.

Consequently Allen looked into the state and county tax books; then took a map of Georgia, superimposed over that map a map of the highways and railroads, and with a pencil, divided the state into 41 parts. The sections are unequal geographically, but as Allen points out, good roads and automobiles have fixed that.

Instead, each unit, as determined by the highways and railroads, is a natural trade area, and most important, each unit contains enough taxable property to support a county government properly.

In 1930, the average Georgia county contained 364.7 square miles; 18,059 persons, and 2,448 poll-taxpayers. The average United States county contained 985.2 square miles, and had a population of 39,965 persons.

40,000 Per County. Under Allen's plan, Georgia counties with the exception of the eight with three representatives in the legislature would have an average population of 40,718, living in a 1,432-square mile area.

Sure that Georgians are a strongly sentimental people, he does not propose that the shell of the old counties be entirely destroyed—only their administrative setup. Each old county in one of the new counties would keep its name, and the old courthouses would be given to the towns for school, or other purposes. At the same time, the county court would be empowered to sit in the former county seats as well as the new center of the political unit.

"Judge Orville Park, of Macon, says there are 2,500 county office holders in Georgia," Allen said. "All experience has shown a larger electorate, covering a larger area, results in the election of bigger men. There can be no doubt that this will be true when county officers represent 1,400 square miles of territory instead of 400 and are chosen by 50,000 people, instead of 2,000 or 18,000 as the case may be."

Think of the savings that would accrue with 41 counties instead of 161. This would give us 120 less jails, 120 less sets of county officers, 120 less county educational systems, 120 less poor houses, 120 less tax receivers, boards of tax assessors, tax collectors, county treasurers, and county commission boards.

Cut Assembly in Half. "And the legislature would be automatically reduced to less than

POWER CONTRACT SIGNED BY MEMPHIS

City and TVA Buy Most of Company's System.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 10.—(AP)—Without ceremony, the $17,360,000 contract whereby the city and TVA buy out most of Memphis Power & Light Company's gas and electric systems was signed today in the city commission chamber.

The mayor, city commission and municipal light, gas and water board signed for the city, President W. J. O'Brien for the company and Henry Fowler, special counsel, for the TVA.

TVA is contributing $2,110,000 of the purchase price and getting certain transmission lines and appurtenant properties. Memphis Power & Light retains part of the properties.

CHAMBERLAIN AIDE WINS BY-ELECTION

British Indicate Approval of Conscription.

LONDON, May 10.—(AP)—Roland Jennings, conservative who supported Prime Minister Chamberlain's military and conscription measures, won today a by-election regarded as the first popular test of the Chamberlain conscription policy.

The contested seat was for the Hailam division of Sheffield. The margin by which Jennings defeated Laborite C. S. Darvill was, however, only 6,094, as compared with the 10,346 by which the conservative candidate carried the division in the last election. The vote was Jennings 16,033, Darvill 9,939.

Darvill fought his campaign largely on an anti-Chamberlain, anti-conscription issue, while Jennings backed the government.

WITNESSES QUIZZED IN TVA POWER DEAL

House Group Questions Taxation, Scope of Operation of Tennessee Plan.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(AP)—Members of a house military affairs subcommittee bombarded Tennessee Valley Authority witnesses today with questions respecting private utility taxation replacement and limitation of TVA's area of operation.

The questions followed testimony that action must be completed before June 20 on legislation to permit consummation of contracts for the purchase of Tennessee Electric Power properties in Tennessee. Chairman May, Democrat, Kentucky, recessed the hearings until next Wednesday. J. A. Krug, chief power engineer for the TVA; Mayor E. D. Bass and Chairman L. J. Wilhoite, of the Chattanooga Public Power Board, testified that the whole deal by which TVA, Chattanooga, Nashville and other cities, together with 11 co-operatives would take over TEP electric properties depended upon house passage of the Norris bill within six weeks.

May and Republican members questioned the witnesses about the desirability of an amendment authorizing state authorities to tax the distribution systems in the same manner and same rate private utilities are taxed.

Wilhoite said taxation would be worked out on a satisfactory basis.

AUTHORITY SOUGHT FOR OCEAN AIR LINE

Export Firm Asks Permission To Operate Trans-Atlantic Routes.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(P)—American Export Airlines, Inc., applied to the Civil Aeronautics Authority today for authority to operate trans-Atlantic air routes.

It asked permission to operate routes between New York and Baltimore, Md., or Charleston, S. C., via Botwood, New Foundland, to Foynes, Ireland, and between the United States ports and Horta, Azores, Biscarosse and Marseilles, France.

The company indicated that as soon as the CAA approves the consolidated flying boat now contracted for, it plans to make three survey flights with it.

The CAA now has under consideration an application by Pan American Airways for permission to establish a trans-Atlantic service.

American Export Airlines, Inc., is affiliated with American Export Lines, Inc., which operates a fleet of 18 vessels.

Referendum on War Urged in Senate

La Follette Opens Drive To Add Requirement of People's Consent to Neutrality Law.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—(P)—A new drive was begun in the senate today to supplement neutrality legislation with a requirement that the American people must give consent in a referendum before American troops can be sent into action on foreign soil.

A judiciary subcommittee began hearings on this proposal, with Senator La Follette, Progressive, Wisconsin, expressing his support in language that reminded many listeners of the night more than 20 years ago when his father and predecessor in the senate spoke for hours against American entry into the World War.

Cites History. "History proves," La Follette said today, "that the legislative branch of our government cannot prevent measures from being taken which lead to war. Congress has no veto power in practical effect."

Congress can act in such circumstances, he said, only after the foreign policy of the current administration has led to a demand by the President for a declaration of war. Then, it acts, he added, "with cheers, mixed with epithets and howls of derision against those few men who may oppose" declaring war.

Only minor changes in the wording distinguished the referendum proposal from the Ludlow amendment to the constitution which was defeated in the house last year by only 11 votes. La Follette said that if, as administration spokesmen contend, their policy of helpfulness to Great Britain in the present European situation holds no likelihood of taking America into a European war, they should support his referendum proposal, for it would "buttress" their position.

METHODIST SEALS 23-YEAR SCHISM

The Methodist church to the worship of God and the establishment of his kingdom among men everywhere through Jesus Christ our Lord, Amen.

The benediction was pronounced by Bishop John L. Nuelson, of Geneva, Switzerland.

In closing business sessions today the conference adopted a peace resolution recognizing "honest difference of opinion" on peace measures and defeated by the closest vote of any session a proposal to grant women full clergy rights.

An echo of the unsuccessful fight led by Alf M. Landon last night to send back to committee a clause of the church social creed supporting members who are "conscientious objectors" to war was seen by some delegates in one section of the peace resolution. It read:

"There exists an honest difference of opinion in regard to the particular form which the conviction of that (Methodist) church in this crucial (peace) issue ought to take."

"Objector" Clause Stands. The "conscientious objector" clause, however, which also recognizes the right of those members whose consciences so dictate to serve in the armed forces in time of war, stood as it was adopted last night.

The peace resolution merely pledged the church, "undivided opposition to the spirit of war," to "exert every possible influence" for peaceful settlement of international differences; to urge congress and the President to "take every possible step to avoid the entanglement" of this nation in war, and to provide for peace education of children.

Allegiance to U. S. The conference also pledged allegiance of the new church to the federal government.

In the rush to close business this afternoon, two controversial resolutions were sidetracked.

One would have placed the conference on record opposing the shipment of munitions to Japan. Landon last night contended the "conscientious objector" resolution should not be passed while the Japanese proposal, which he termed an "unfriendly act to a sovereign power" was pending. Many delegates said the conference was not legally empowered to act on such a proposal.

A resolution asking deletion from the "articles of religion" of a section requiring preachers to support foreign lands to support their civil governments was referred to the council of bishops for a report at the 1940 general conference.

The vote by which delegates turned down the plan of full clergy rights for women was 384 to 371.

Previously the Methodist Protestant church granted full clergy rights, the north church ordained women and permitted them to preach but not to vote in general conference. The Methodist church granted no clergy rights.

The north church plan was adopted by the conference. Rights of existing Methodist Protestant women ministers were not affected.

Eventually, the conference decided, members of those groups can work out plans for a single organization if desired. On the platform as the delegates gathered for their "declaration of union" service was an old marble-topped table used for communion services at the 1844 conference of the general church at which the north and south branches divided.

Officiating at the service were 14 bishops from the three former church divisions.

that services essential to the safety, health and well being of citizens "must be dispensed with or ad valorem tax rates must be increased."

It pointed specifically to the loss of highway contracts, depleted revenues, return by the state of insane patients to counties and inadequate financing for educational and social welfare needs, citing the "imperative need for an immediate revision of the tax structure of the state."

New Chairmen Listed.

District chairmen elected were: First, W. E. Darden, of Emanuel county; second, H. T. Brice, of Brooks; third, T. G. Reeves, of Muscogee; fourth, C. W. Matthews, of Talbot; fifth, Ed L. Almond, of Fulton; sixth, Troy M. Raines, of Bibb; seventh, H. J. Wood, of Wilkes; eighth, Walter E. Lee, of Ware; ninth, Frank A. Smith, of Rabun; and tenth, E. C. Mertins, of Richmond.

The county commissioners paused today to pay tribute to the late president of their state-wide organization, Charles A. Matthews, of DeKalb county.

A special committee will be named to follow custom and provide a gift for Matthews, which will be presented in behalf of association to the widow by Julius A. McCurdy, DeKalb county attorney. Matthews was president for the year which ended today, but he died early in January.

2 PER CENT SALES TAX URGED FOR SCHOOLS

State Senator Paul Lindsay, of Atlanta, an opponent of a sales tax for many years, addressed an open letter to members of the general assembly yesterday asking them to assemble immediately and pass a two per cent sales tax allocated entirely to the common schools.

"A two per cent sales tax is a fair tax," his letter said, "and in the present crisis of our state, I am willing to vote it on our people's order that our schools may go on and our children may be properly educated, and in order that funds may be available to feed and care for our insane, our blind and our helpless old people."

Newspaper Photo Recalls Incident of 1874

"I would like to ask him if he was ever in Georgia as a boy," said Mrs. Emma Swafford, 75, of 122 Moreland avenue, N. E., who believes that Gustav Blair, Phoenix, (Ariz.) carpenter, spent two days 65 years ago at her father's hotel in Clayton.

ROSS KIDNAP CASE LINKED TO GEORGIA

Elderly Atlanta Woman Believes She Saw Missing Lad at Clayton.

By LEE FUHRMAN.

The memory of a kindly, white-haired Atlanta woman last night turned back 65 years to her childhood—to recall an incident in Georgia that may close another gap in the mystery of Charley Ross, whose kidnapping in 1874 shocked the entire nation.

For Mrs. Emma Swafford, of 122 Moreland avenue, N. E., now 75 years old, believes that a boy who spent two days at her father's hotel in Clayton was Gustav Blair, 69-year-old Phoenix (Ariz.) carpenter, whose claim that he is Charley Ross was upheld by a superior court jury.

Seated in a rocking chair in her home, the alert and cheerful Mrs. Swafford, wearing a white apron over her black dress, pointed to a picture of Blair in Wednesday morning's Constitution and said: "I would like to ask that man if he remembers being in Georgia, in a little mountain town, and playing with three little Georgia children."

Recounts Incident. Then, Mrs. Swafford, peering mentally down a vista of 65 years, recounted the incident of her far-off girlhood, which she believes is a link with one of the most celebrated kidnappings in American history.

"I was 10 years old," she began. "My father was D. T. Duncan. He was sheriff of Rabun county, and ran the Blue Ridge hotel."

"One day, in 1874, two men came to the hotel. A little boy was with them. The boy was about four years old. They remained only two days, but I remember the incident well because I heard my father say that he thought this boy was little Charley Ross."

"The boy was well-dressed and had plenty of money, which was given to him by the two men. He seemed to think nothing of money. He was righteously with money. He just threw it around and gave it away. One time he threw a bill into the fireplace. One of my sisters and one of my brothers, who were younger than me, and myself, played with him."

Strange Remark. "One time he said to us, 'My father murdered.' This struck me as a strange remark. I told my father about it. From what I can remember, my father was suspicious of the two men. He was about to do some checking up when the men and the boy left."

"I remember well hearing my father say he thought this boy answered the description of the Ross boy."

At the time Ross was kidnapped in 1874, there were no railroads in the Rabun county mountain country. The area, however, was a popular resort section for Charlestonians, who traveled over dirt roads.

In 1874, the development of Tallulah Falls as a resort had not yet come. Clayton itself is one of Georgia's older mountain towns, having been incorporated in 1823. Mrs. Swafford has lived in Atlanta for 14 years. She is the mother of six children, only two of whom are now living.

Georgia Tech Honor Day Exercises Set for Grant Field Friday Night

Individual Awards and Exhibition Drills Will Feature Program; Sponsors Are Named for Military Ball To Follow Demonstration.

Award of fourteen individual honors and performance of four exhibition drills will be the feature of Honor Day exercises of Georgia Tech at Grant Field Friday night. The program is to be presented jointly by the military and naval R. O. T. C. The demonstration will begin at 7:15 o'clock when the units will march on the field and form a provisional regiment.

Drills will include those of Battery E, Coast Artillery, commanded by Cadet Captain Robert E. Anderson. This battery, which won the competitive drill for all Army companies, will receive the A. E. Steele Trophy. Also giving demonstration drill will be the Second company, Navy, commanded by Cadet Lieutenant William G. Thrash, which won the competitive drill in its class. Dean W. Vernon Skiles will present a cup awarded by the Bureau of Navigation.

The annual Military Ball will follow the demonstration in Grant Field. Officers and sponsors who will lead in the grand march are: Cadet Colonel George B. Smith with Miss Helen Bateman, Macomb; Cadet Col. Joseph E. Siler Jr. with Miss Margaret Lantz, Atlanta; Cadet Major Clyde Reid, Atlanta; Cadet Captain Donald R. Eastman Jr. with Miss Sue Pearson, Atlanta; Cadet Captain James R. Addy with Miss Josephine Pilexio, Gainesville.

First Battalion cadet officers and sponsors are Cadet Major Frank J. Skundala and Miss Jerry Hughes, Atlanta; Cadet Captain Walter W. Howie and Miss Harriet Fuller, Atlanta; Cadet Captain John W. Dillard and Miss Harriet Fuller, Atlanta; Cadet Captain Robert F. Stead Jr. and Miss Ruth Robey, Atlanta; Cadet Captain Ernest G. Gruters and Miss Peggy White, Hopkinston; and Cadet Captain James W. that services essential to the safety, health and well being of citizens "must be dispensed with or ad valorem tax rates must be increased."

It pointed specifically to the loss of highway contracts, depleted revenues, return by the state of insane patients to counties and inadequate financing for educational and social welfare needs, citing the "imperative need for an immediate revision of the tax structure of the state."

New Chairmen Listed.

District chairmen elected were: First, W. E. Darden, of Emanuel county; second, H. T. Brice, of Brooks; third, T. G. Reeves, of Muscogee; fourth, C. W. Matthews, of Talbot; fifth, Ed L. Almond, of Fulton; sixth, Troy M. Raines, of Bibb; seventh, H. J. Wood, of Wilkes; eighth, Walter E. Lee, of Ware; ninth, Frank A. Smith, of Rabun; and tenth, E. C. Mertins, of Richmond.

The county commissioners paused today to pay tribute to the late president of their state-wide organization, Charles A. Matthews, of DeKalb county.

A special committee will be named to follow custom and provide a gift for Matthews, which will be presented in behalf of association to the widow by Julius A. McCurdy, DeKalb county attorney. Matthews was president for the year which ended today, but he died early in January.

2 PER CENT SALES TAX URGED FOR SCHOOLS

State Senator Paul Lindsay, of Atlanta, an opponent of a sales tax for many years, addressed an open letter to members of the general assembly yesterday asking them to assemble immediately and pass a two per cent sales tax allocated entirely to the common schools.

"A two per cent sales tax is a fair tax," his letter said, "and in the present crisis of our state, I am willing to vote it on our people's order that our schools may go on and our children may be properly educated, and in order that funds may be available to feed and care for our insane, our blind and our helpless old people."

COMMISSIONERS LAUD CONSTITUTION

Thank Major Clark Howell for Contribution to State's Development.

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 10.—The Association of County Commissioners of Georgia broke precedent in concluding sessions of the three-day annual convention here today and passed unanimously from the floor a resolution thanking The Atlanta Constitution and Major Clark Howell, editor and publisher, for contributions to "the state's governmental and agricultural development."

The measure dealt specifically with the progressive government awards of 1937, and the Plant-to-Prosper campaign of 1937, both of which were conceived and executed through The Constitution by Major Howell.

Resolution Announced.

The text of the resolution follows: "Whereas, The Atlanta Constitution, under the able leadership of Major Clark Howell, editor and publisher, has exhibited a keen interest in the governmental and agricultural development of Georgia, and

"Whereas, in 1937 The Constitution sponsored The Atlanta Constitution Progressive Government Awards, given to the Georgia counties making the most progress in their governments, and

COTTON MEN TOLD RATES ARE UNFAIR

Manning Says Manchuria Even Favored Over South.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 10.—(P)—A South Carolinian told the National Cotton Congress and Warehouse Association today that existing freight rates not only favor other sections over the south but on some products favor far-off Manchuria over the south.

Wyndham Manning, of Columbia, a South Carolina director of the National Cotton Council, declared:

"Oils grown in Manchuria and landed at New Orleans can be loaded on a tank car and shipped to Chicago for 28 cents per 100 pounds. Cottonseed oil grown in Louisiana, crushed there, loaded on the same tank car and shipped to Chicago is 56 cents per 100. The freight is just 100 per cent higher on American-grown oil."

Mother's Day Chosen by Parents For Christening William Mason Jr.

By Sally Forth.

MOTHER'S DAY has been selected by Mr. and Mrs. William M. Mason for the christening of their young son, William Jr. The ceremony is scheduled for 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon in St. Philip's cathedral and Dean De Oves will be the officiating clergyman. The date for the important occasion was also chosen by the baby's parents, as May 14 marks young William's second birthday month.

Mrs. Mason, you know, is the former Dorothy Dean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Ewing Dean. Mrs. Fred C. Mason is the paternal grandmother of Billy, the name by which the little boy is called. William H. Mason, the baby's great uncle, and Ellis Gay will assume the vows of godfather for the child, and Emmy Martin, a lifelong friend of the baby's mother who was an attendant in the Dean-Mason wedding, will stand as godmother.

For his christening Billy will wear a dainty hand-made dress which is a gift from his maternal great-grandmother, Mrs. Thomas D. Stewart, a beloved pioneer Atlantan.

By the way, Sally hears that Billy's parents, who are popular members of society's young married ranks, chaperoned their first party last week end, when they accompanied Frances Peace and Ellis Gay to St. Simons Island for a house party. Incidentally, the young chaperons celebrated their first wedding anniversary last Saturday while at the beach, where one year ago they spent their honeymoon.

OCCUPYING a conspicuous place in the hall at Deerland, historic home of Mr. and Mrs. William Schroder on Peachtree road, is a magnificent painting of Hanover, the great-granddaughter of Johnstown, winner of last Saturday's Kentucky Derby. Mrs. Schroder, the former Suzanne Spalding, is a native of the famous Blue Grass section in Kentucky, you know, and members of her family have entered several thoroughbreds in the annual race at Churchill Downs.

Hanover, a past winner of the Derby, was owned by Mrs. Schroder's late paternal uncle, Milton Young of Lexington, Ky., and has a most interesting history. Johnstown's famous ancestor was bred at Runnymede, vast estate of Senator and Mrs. J. N. Camden in Paris, Ky., recently described in this column. Sally is informed that some time after he captured the coveted Derby trophy, Hanover injured his foot, and died a month later. His late owner was so proud of the gallant stallion that he sent his hoofs to a New York jeweler and had them mounted on silver, to be used as inkstands. The latter are now the property of Tom Young, a distinguished relative of Mrs. Schroder, who resides in Kentucky.

The painting at Deerland is the work of Henry Stull, and portrays Hanover in his famous stride, guided by his red-coated jockey. The work of art was bequeathed the prominent Atlantan by her uncle, and is listed among her most prized possessions.

THE children who attend the Christ the King school are very anxious for a movie camera so that they can make their own movies on subjects of their own choosing.

Knowing how their Parent-Teacher Association accomplishes everything it sets out to do, the children sought the aid of the organization, with the result that on Saturday evening a benefit barbecue will be held at Lakemoore on Roswell road. It seems that the P.-T. A. members decided to combine pleasure with the business of raising money for the camera, so on that evening they, with their husbands, will assemble for an evening of fun.

At 6:30 o'clock the barbecue will be served, and afterwards an orchestra will furnish music for dancing. So you can see what a

Miss Sammie Porter And David Terrell Wed at Church

The marriage of Miss Sammie Porter to David Terrell was solemnized yesterday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock at the Peachtree Christian church, Dr. Robert Burns officiating.

Mrs. Victor Clark presented organ music and guests were seated by Joe Milligan, Raymond Britton, Joe Lewis and Jack Lowry. The altar was beautified with white flowers placed before a background of palms and ferns. Seven-branched candelabra held white tapers.

Miss Nell Porter was her sister's maid of honor and she wore a floor-length gown of old rose chiffon made with a Peter Pan collar and buttoned down the front of the shirred bodice. She carried a nosegay of old-fashioned pastel flowers and wore a halo of old rose chignon trimmed with a matching veil in her hair.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Clifford Elliott, and at the altar was met by the groom and his best man John Daniel.

The bride wore a floor-length dress of white blue chiffon made with a pebble-chiffon jacket and a full skirt. The collar was Peter Pan style and buttons trimmed the front pocket of the bodice. Her hat was trimmed with pink and blue veiling and she carried a round bouquet of valley lilies centered with orchids.

The bride's mother, Mrs. T. A. Porter wore a sky blue chiffon with a leghorn hat and a cluster of gardenias.

Mrs. J. A. Terrell, mother of the groom, wore navy blue chiffon trimmed with lighter blue and worn with a straw hat and a spray of gardenias.

After the wedding the young couple left for a wedding trip to Florida. The bride wore an ensemble of old rose, and a hat of black straw. She wore a shoulder bouquet of orchids.

Upon their return, the bridal couple will reside at 33 Eleventh street.

Climaxing the round of entertainment honoring the couple was the rehearsal party given Tuesday by Miss Frances Terrell and Mrs. Neville Black at their home on Ponce de Leon avenue. Guests included members of the wedding party.

Mrs. Clifford T. Elliott entertained Sunday at a tea for the bride and groom at her home on Briarcliff road. Spring flowers were used throughout the house. One hundred and fifty guests called during the afternoon.

Assisting in receiving the guests were Miss Porter and Mr. Terrell, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Terrell, parents of the groom.

Mrs. Ashton Heads Sylvan Hills Club. Mrs. T. B. Ashton was elected president of the Sylvan Hills Garden Club at the last meeting of the club. Those elected to serve with her are Mrs. Marvin Green, vice president; Mrs. B. B. Martin, corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. E. Williams, recording secretary; Mrs. H. H. Friedwell, treasurer; Mrs. H. C. Steed, membership; Mrs. L. D. Hall, publicity; Mrs. C. E. Purcell, plant and seed exchange; Mrs. D. H. Hooper, ways and means; Mrs. C. E. Lowry, flower show; Mrs. W. H. Sivils, hospitality; Miss Lois Hollingsworth, program; Mrs. C. H. Farmer, beautification of streets; Mrs. W. H. Kimberly, telephone; Mrs. J. R. Price, Mrs. W. C. Ginn, Mrs. H. H. Friedwell and Mrs. J. C. Attaway, representatives to the fifth district federation.

The May meeting will feature a flower show and will be held Tuesday afternoon, May 23, at 2:30, at the Sylvan Hills school. The club has just completed a most successful second year under the leadership of Mrs. M. B. McKee.

Forest Garden Club. Forest Garden Club meets at 2:30 o'clock today at the home of Mrs. E. R. Anderson on 4 Dartmouth avenue, Avondale Estates. The tour to the Hettie Jane Dunaway gardens near Newnan will be postponed until a later date.

Distinguished Women Attend Garden Convention at Sea Island

Mrs. Reynolds Flournoy, of Columbus, president of the Garden Club of Georgia, will preside over the annual convention of the club which opens today for a two-day session at Sea Island. The garden clubs of Glynn county will be hostesses for the convention, for which an interesting program of business meeting and social affairs has been planned.

SEA ISLAND BEACH, Ga., May 10.—Distinguished Garden Club members arriving today at Sea Island for the Garden Club of Georgia convention include Mrs. Reynolds Flournoy, Columbus, president; Mrs. Donald Hastings, Atlanta, past president and vice president of national council; Mrs. Porter Baldwin, of Palm Beach, president of Garden Club of Florida. About 135 garden clubs are represented by more than 300 members present for the convention.

Wednesday night Mrs. Alfred W. Jones entertained at dinner at her Sea Island home, "Runnymede Light," for executive board members. Native island wild flowers featured the decorations with magnolias predominating in the dining room. Mexican poppies, Indian paint brush, Confederate roses and phlox decorated the other rooms.

At the initial business meeting Thursday morning in the Brunswick Memorial auditorium, Mrs. Edwin Fendig, of Brunswick, convention chairman, will give the welcome address. Mrs. Malcolm Fleming, of Peachtree Garden Club, of Atlanta, will respond to the address. The invocation will be given by Rev. J. W. McQueen. The principal question involved at the meetings will be whether to divide the state into three districts with each having a vice president as regent.

A shore luncheon at Saint Simons Island will follow Thursday's meeting, later a tour of historical spots and a tour of Sea Island gardens will be enjoyed by the delegates attending the meeting.

In addition to the many delegates representing Atlanta Garden clubs, many members are attending the sessions and the social affairs planned in honor of the visitors. Mrs. Charles F. Rice, president of the Neighborhood Garden Club, and Mrs. E. N. O'Brien, delegate to the convention, arrived by motor today, and while here are guests at the beach home of Mrs. Shepard Bryan, also a member of the Neighborhood Club.

Mrs. D. C. Shepherd, Mrs. William C. Wardlaw, and Mrs. Murdoch Egan, of the Iris Club, arrived today. Representing the club will be Mrs. Edward F. Daniel Jr., the president, and Mrs. Alex King Jr., a former president.

The Peachtree Garden Club is represented by Mesdames Malcolm Fleming, Prince Webster, Edwin Johnson and Arthur Tufts. Mrs. Joel Hunter Jr. and Mrs. Francis Gilbert are representing the Boxwood Club, and Mrs. James D. Robinson Jr. and Mrs. Francis Willis, of the Mimosa Club, will also attend.

Representing the Northwood Garden Club are Mrs. Russell Dodson, Mrs. James Tarrell and the president, Mrs. Roy Jones. Delegates from the Virginia Avenue Club attending are Mesdames Walton Hall and J. D. Bantley.

Among the attractive visitors in the city are Mrs. George Fuller, of Lansing, Mich., and Mrs. Clarence Butler, of Benton Harbor, Mich., who arrived Tuesday to visit their brother and sister, Dr. and Mrs. William A. Smith, at their home on Lenox road. A series of interesting parties has been planned in compliment to these visitors, the first of which will be the breakfast at which Mrs. Bernard Shackelford will be hostess this morning at the Atlanta Woman's Club.

This evening Dr. and Mrs. Leland Baggett will entertain at a steak fry in honor of Mrs. Fuller and Mrs. Butler and their hosts. The party will be given at the Baggett home on Wesley road. Tomorrow Mrs. Smith will give a tea as a complimentary gesture to her sisters, the occasion assembling 100 friends to meet them at her home between the hours of 4 and 6 o'clock.

Mrs. Bernard Shackelford will pour tea and assisting the hostess in entertaining will be Mesdames George Fuller, Cliff Sauls, Harry Rogers, Leland Baggett, Marvin Cannon, Jeff McCord, W. C. Walters and James P. Hanner.

Dr. and Mrs. Smith will be hosts at a party at the dance at the Biltmore hotel on Saturday evening in honor of their guests, and on Sunday Mrs. J. E. Sommerfield will honor them at a tea at her home on Ponce de Leon avenue. Other parties for the visitors will be announced later.

Miss Marie Banks Makes Address. Miss Marie Banks, graduate of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, 1939, gave her graduation address at the meeting of the Tabernacle Love Class at the home of Mary Emma Ooghee, in Sylvan Hills, recently.

After the address a business session followed. Miss Evelyn Johnson, class president, presided and the teacher, Mrs. E. B. Goodwin, made reports.

Presentation was made by Mary Emma Ooghee of the poster stand and blackboard stand to the class in memory of her grandmother, Mrs. Mary A. Stoddard, who was a member of a Baptist church for 63 years.

Present were Misses Bazemore, Dicie Bennett, Catherine Bagby, Evelyn Johnson, Mary Nell Johnson, Esther Gaines, Dorothy Gunter, Bobbie Lander, Mary McCloskey, Mary Emma Ooghee, Sara Vandegriff, Ethel Mae Whiddy, Betty Wood and Mesdames E. B. Goodwin, teacher; Dan P. Coker, Ted Moore and Johnnie Roberts. Visitors were Mesdames Marie Banks, Alma Boyd Burnett, Virginia Goodwin, Martha Bruce, Jean Bazemore, Viola Miller, Alice Oxford and Mesdames A. N. Bazemore, C. E. Driekel, B. Ooghee and D. A. Bunker.

The hostess was assisted by Mrs. A. N. Bazemore. On May 7 the Love Class presented the teacher, Mrs. E. B. Goodwin, with a corsage of red roses.

Miss Rachel Neely Is Central Figure At Three Parties

Miss Rachel Neely, whose marriage to Benjamin M. Parker, of Washington, D. C., will be an important event of the near future, was central figure at three parties yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas English were hosts last evening at 7 o'clock at an informal buffet supper at their home on Dan Johnson road complimenting the bride-elect.

The house was beautified throughout with white flowers, and in the dining room the table was overlaid with a handsome filet cloth, and centered with an artistic arrangement of white roses. Silver candlesticks holding white tapers completed the appointments.

Guests included 12 close friends of the hosts and honor guest.

Mrs. W. Colquitt Carter entertained yesterday at an informal luncheon at 1:30 o'clock at her home on Wesley road, honoring Miss Neely. A color scheme of pink and white, featuring roses, was used in the decorations.

At 4:30 o'clock, Miss Margaret Stovall was hostess at a seated tea for the bride-elect at her home on Thirteenth street.

Assisting Miss Stovall was her sister, Mrs. Russell Stovall.

The tea table, overlaid with a lace and cutwork cloth, was centered with a silver bowl filled with roses, iris and lemon lilies.

Present were the bride-elect's wedding attendants.

Decatur Musical. An event of National Music Week in Decatur will be the annual piano recital given at the Woman's Club this evening at 8 o'clock by pupils of Mesdames Natalie Buchanan, Weyman Gower and L. D. Jolly.

Taking part will be Walter Abbott, Clara Blanton, Sylvie Blanton, Betty Barnes, J. L. Carter, Leon Carter, Jack Coffey, Marjorie Chambers, Walter Coffey, Eloyse De Lozier, Don De Lozier, De Lozier, Betty Elliott, Ann Foot, Martha Jean Gower, Marguerite Hall, Mimi Higginbotham, Lanette Hutchins, Barbara Johnston, Marion Leathers, Radine McGee, Mary McQuinn, Lois Modine, Louise Moore, Sue Ross, Paul Sharrin, Martha Stovall, Virginia Sudreth, Virginia Jones.

Friends are invited to attend.

Initial Parties Announced Today For Miss Wright, Mr. McKenzie

Of social import today is the announcement of the wedding plans of Miss Virginia Douglas Wright and Gordon C. McKenzie Jr., of Ashburn. The marriage of the young couple will be solemnized at 5:30 o'clock on the afternoon of June 6 at Druid Hills Baptist church.

Rev. O. C. Cooper, of Ashburn, will perform the marriage service, and Mrs. Ethel Beyers, organist, will present a musical program.

The bride-elect will be given in marriage by her father, Thomas Parks Wright, and the groom-elect's best man will be his brother, Henry McKenzie, of Ashburn.

Mrs. F. W. Gass Jr., of Greenville, Tenn., sister of the bride-to-be, will be matron of honor, and Miss Eleanor Deas will be maid of honor.

Bridesmaids will be Mrs. L. J. Stephens Jr., Misses Barbara Lee Murlin, Florie Guy and Lucia Statham.

Ushers and groomsmen will include F. W. Gass Jr., T. P. Wright, brother of the bride-elect; Eustace E. Bishop, L. J. Stephens Jr., Keith Reyher, brother of the groom-elect, of Russellville, Ky., and Grier Monroe, of Ashburn, brother of the groom-elect.

The popular bridal pair will be honored at a series of pre-nuptial festivities, the first to be a luncheon at which Miss Pat Wilson will compliment the bride-elect on May 19 at Davidson's tea room.

On May 20 Miss Lucy Statham will honor Miss Wright at a luncheon at her home on Peachtree road, and on May 26 Miss Wright and Mr. McKenzie at an al fresco dinner at her home on Ponce de Leon avenue.

Miss Eleanor Deas will entertain on May 27 at her home on Haynes Manor drive in compliment to the bride-elect. That evening Mrs. L. J. Stephens and Miss Barbara Deas will be hostesses at a supper at the Tavern tea room for the bridal pair.

On June 2 Miss Barbara Lee Merlin will compliment Miss Wright at a luncheon to be given at her home on Emory road.

Mr. and Mrs. Eustace Bishop have chosen June 4 as the date for the buffet supper at which they will honor the bridal couple at their home on Ridgewood drive. Guests at this affair will be limited to members of the immediate families of the honor guests.

On June 5 Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Gass Jr. will be hosts at the rehearsal party at the home of the bride-elect's parents on Oakdale road.

Other parties are being planned in compliment to the affianced couple, the dates and nature of which will be announced later.

Gamma Delta Beta Plans Formal Dance

Try a Swing Session As Exercise Step-Up

By Ida Jean Kain.

For most people "swing" has to do with music and dancing, but it exercises here you—try swinging them! That's the use to which Amy Ellerman, the noted concert and opera singer, puts the popular syncopated form of activity and she says it keeps her fit even during the most strenuous concert hours.

The idea is, according to Miss Ellerman, that swing exercises are more beneficial since they induce a natural rhythm of the muscles and an exhilaration of the spirits instead of the boredom of a cut and dried routine.

The exercises are, naturally, done to music, and here is the first in Miss Ellerman's unique regime:

Stand with the feet about 15 inches apart and drop the arms loosely in front, allowing the trunk to flop forward also, and cross the wrists with a loose-jointed, relaxing motion. Then, swing the arms apart, high in the air, and rise on the toes. Relax into the first position and keep it up in one-two rhythm.

The foregoing exercise calls a surprising number of muscle groups into action. You will find that it strengthens the lower abdominal wall, stretches the waist and firms the upper arms. Besides all that, it is an effective circulation jogger.

For a neat and trim waistline, Miss Ellerman likes this exercise: Stand with feet wide apart, left hand on hip. On the first count, swing the right arm well across the body. On the second count, swing it high up to the right and backward, twisting the upper part of the body in the direction of the swing. This exercise makes a pivot of your waist—always a slimming procedure—and strengthens the pectoral muscles. Repeat to the count of one-two for 10 times, then change arms.

Here is another swingtime exercise guaranteed to do wonders for the waist, abdomen and hips. Stand with the feet well apart and, keeping knees straight, tummy pulled up, bend down to touch

A Characteristic Of Degeneration Is Flabbiness

By Dr. William Brady.

Most persons have heard of "fatty degeneration of the heart" or fatty degeneration of some other organ. It sounds pretty bad and it is so. If any reader of this perchance has fatty degeneration let me say right here that I'm sorry about that, but it is a waste of his or her limited time reading further, for there's nothing more I can say about it.

But I do hope that a good many readers who haven't got it yet but are certainly training for it will stick around until I explain what it is and how to prevent it from developing. While it is probably true that harm is the likely consequence of a layman's delving into medical literature, reading about symptoms and diagnosis of various diseases he wonders whether he is developing, on the other hand bits of information a normal person gains from reading about health and prophylaxis seldom do any harm and often do good.

Fatty degeneration occurs not in fat folk so much as in the merely flabby. It is not to be regarded as a "collection of fat around the heart" or "turning of the heart muscle to fat."

Pathologists of an earlier day debated the process by which fatty degeneration occurs. Most of them attempted to distinguish what they called "fatty infiltration" from fatty degeneration, in the muscle of the heart or in other organs. Perhaps they were led astray by the observation that overweight or moderate obesity often precedes by 10 years or more the development of definite organic disease of the heart or other organs. From the newer knowledge of nutrition it is now generally recognized that fatty infiltration, that is, a deposit of fat over or between muscles or muscle cells, is a comparatively insignificant condition, but true fatty degeneration is always serious, for it is an actual conversion of the substance, the protoplasm, of the cell into fat. Of course fat replacing cellular substance cannot function as a muscle cell or a cell of any organ or tissue should function, and so fatty degeneration is a kind of slow death of the cells, tissues or organs involved. But please bear in mind it is as likely to occur in a person who is not overweight as it is in a person who is too stout.

Wasting diseases such as cancer and tuberculosis, prolonged fever, pernicious anemia and advancing age are common causes of fatty degeneration especially in the heart. Fatty degeneration occurs in the muscle wall of the arteries too. The diaphragm may be involved.

The most obvious and striking characteristic of fatty degeneration of muscle, heart or other muscle, is flabbiness.

How to train for fatty degeneration: Eat, drink, smoke and watch your professionals work, play or perform. Flabbiness is luxury which only the well-to-do can afford to try to conceal.

Sonja Henie, the skating film star, is credited with having invented this new fastening trick for this smart summer outfit. The "lumberjack" bodice of white linen is buttoned to the coral sweater by means of matching buttons and slot buttonholes piped in coral. The flared skirt also is of white linen.

Petite Sonja Buttons Her Bodice to Sweater

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, May 10.—Sonja Henie has invented a new trick of fastening in a smart summer outfit she wears in "Second Fiddle." The "lumberjack" bodice of white linen is buttoned to the coral sweater by means of matching buttons and slot buttonholes piped in coral. The flared skirt is also of white linen.

Fay Bainter and Spring Byington, two examples of how-to-be-lovely-through-out, are also good examples of what to wear at the new fashionable age (the Duchess of Windsor was 40 when she married the Duke). Howard Shoup, who designed Miss Bainter's wardrobe for "Family Reunion," puts her into slacks, a tailored suit, and into dignified crepe with equal abandon. Fay plays a mother role, but that doesn't keep her from lounging about in the picture—in a gay slacks suit of aqua sharkskin with bright tomato sash and bolero. For evening, you will see her bright and right in yellow pleated crepe with a wide corset of jeweled blue bachelorette buttons.

Spring Byington, the screen's perennial mother (in the "Jones Family" series, and currently in Warner's "Give Me a Child"), contrives to be maternal and smart. Spring tells me that she likes anything "unusual"—i. e., her new spring suit of black and white silk twill with peplum jacket, the suit in black, the peplum unexpectedly half-white, the same idea carried out in a wide white hem; also white accessories. Another favorite of Miss Byington's is a draped pink jersey afternoon frock with brown organdy coat. Her picture hat of matching organdy has a pretty apple-blossom snood.

Dorothy Lamour indulged in a hat-buying spree during her recent visit to New York. Her favorite is a violet-colored shallow felt pillbox, widest across the top and fringed with violet silk at either side (a change from the flower and feather crimmings). Another has a thick twist of coarse strands of copper-colored viscose attached to a snood of mesh made of similar strands, with two chapeau carnations bunched at the left. Another is a tricornie in shape, hand-knitted in plain white, with shirley black cord yarn, with multicolored cords holding it in place on the head and tied in big knots over the hair.

Sydney Guilaroff, originator of the "baby bob" and hair stylist for Claudette Colbert, Norma Shearer, Billie Burke, Annabella, Ina Claire, and many others, has this advice for you—

"If you're going to be outdoors a great deal, wear a kerchief to protect your head. At no time should you expose your hair to the sun for any length of time unless you wish to do your scalp irreparable damage."

"But, when you get your permanent," says the hair stylist, "make sure there is just as much oil put in your hair as there is wave lotion. The oil revitalizes the hair in the baking process and does enormous good. It may take a little longer in the process, but experience shows that the permanent itself will not be affected."

In-Law Subject Is Prime Favorite

By Caroline Chatfield.

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD: I have a problem that is slowly poisoning my life. I have two brothers and sisters whom I love dearly not only because they are my brothers and sisters but because they are admirable and worthy of my love. They would like very much to be friendly with my husband but he sits in sullen silence when they are around. My old father who passed away recently was given the same treatment. It couldn't be the fault of my family for he has the same reactions to anyone I like. I have not had a meal with my husband for several years because I dare not ask my husband to go with me and I hesitate to go without him. I go with him to see his family and treat them as I would have him treat mine. Oh, it's a hard life for me but I am not asking for pity, rather for advice. B.4.

ANSWER: Dear madam, you haven't any right to ram your family down your husband's throat. Neither has any right to separate you from them. So why don't you have it out with him here and now, making it plain that you are asking nothing of him as far as they are concerned, making it equally plain that you aren't permitting him to separate you from your brothers and sisters. Let him understand that you intend to visit them whenever it suits you and have them visit you when he's away from home.

Husbands and wives form the habit of threshing out the same subject year after year and never finishing with it, (the in-law subject is the prime favorite) which is a great mistake; for each of them gets set in his or her opinion and the more they talk the more hard feeling is created. If the bone of contention can be disposed of and never dragged out again everybody is better off. So my advice is: settle the question once and for all and even if the settlement isn't entirely satisfactory it will at least bring you peace.

You shouldn't forget, either, that an attitude like your husband's is always a result of a deep, deep sense of insufficiency. It's very difficult for the normal mind to grasp this fact but it is as plain as the nose on the face: that when a man behaves like a fiend to his wife's family that has never done him any harm it's because he's jealous of their place in his wife's life and fearful lest they push him out. Pathetic to a degree because the poor wretched man defeats himself while he fights with all he has to win.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

INCONSISTENCY: Women are abandoning their conviction that their husbands owe them respect and admiration. They are now settling for the idea that their husbands owe them happiness.

Lady Who Does Her Own Digging

By Elizabeth Boykin.

The lady across the street is a real digger. She really does her own digging... she was the one who put me onto the use of a garden fork and showed me how you can practically plow with it even if you aren't built on strong-arm lines. Just set it in place, stand on it with your entire weight and in it goes deep into the ground much more easily than a spade.

A Big Order.

She almost got ahead of herself last week, however, all because she made a two-ambitious order from a nursery that advertised some tempting specials. My neighbor suddenly was confronted with 30 barberry plants, a hundred pinksyandra shoots, two dogwoods, three wisterias, and 25 chrysanthemums that had to be got into the ground by hook or crook. Quite a big order for one lady, but she made it. The barberry and pinksyandra were for backgrounds. Notice that her flowering things run all to pinks and lavenders—nearly her whole garden is like that because those are the colors she likes best in the house. Roses, violets, lilacs, tulips, gladioli, sweet peas, peonies, phlox, petunias, asters are her specialties and she's hoping to do well with her pink dogwood, chrysanthemums and wisteria.

A Tiered Effect.

Her flower arrangements are breath-taking... we remember a tea table she did for a big party, and a sweet pea and pink roses arranged in a three-tiered glass epergne (an old one but the same idea could be copied with matching bowls of graduated sizes). This was the tall centerpiece... it was flanked by three finger bowls in a row on each side, filled with sweet peas, with stems cut short, and a pink rose in the center of each.

Another dramatic effect she gets with peonies in a corner whatnot. She has low, white containers to fit on each shelf and arranges pale pink peonies in them—you can imagine! For her mantel, she has a series of shallow oblong glass containers which fit together and cover the entire mantel shelf—this looks like a prim flower border growing there when she arranges flowers in season here.

MY DAY Trade Representatives Present British Cloth

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

HYDE PARK, N. Y.—Yesterday the representatives of the various trade interests of Great Britain, with a certain amount of ceremony, presented me with the box containing the three beautifully woven pieces of blue cloth. They made me a very charming little speech and gave me the key to the box, which I then unlocked to find three different weaves, all light, sheer and beautiful in texture.

With Miss Clare Potter's help, we decided which was the lightest. Before I left the hotel, she took my measurements, and I promised to try to give her a fitting the first time I came to New York.

From there I went to Mr. George By's office, with whom it is always a joy to talk. Then I went on to see a lady who had written me an interesting letter and begged me to come and see the screens which she is now painting professionally, after years of doing it purely as a hobby. The screens seemed to me very charming, and the idea of having a screen especially made for the room struck me as rather interesting. I hope she succeeds, for to take up a new occupation when your work has gone, requires some courage.

Then came a most delightful two hours. The Barter theater in Abingdon, Va., has decided to present an award to the American who has given the most outstanding performance on the stage in the current year. The first recipient of this award is Miss Laurette Taylor, and they accorded me the honor of presenting her. There were many other present who, as dramatic critics and producers could speak with more discrimination. There were old friends and co-workers who could praise her with warmth and affection, but I am sure that none of them had experienced more real appreciation of her performance, nor were they any happier at being given the privilege of being present at a party in her honor.

I had a double interest in this party because my father had lived for a number of years in Abingdon and the place has always had a little halo of romance for me on that account. A few years ago, I went to the White Top music festival, which is a folk-festival held on the top of a mountain not far from Abingdon, and the story of the Barter Theater was told me, as they pointed out the hotel and the old playhouse on our way through the city.

Mr. Robert Porter Field is responsible for the idea. Of the stories he told me, I like best the one of the man who came in to ask how much milk he would have to pay in order to attend a performance. When told it would be about half a gallon, he disappeared and was seen milking his cow on the lawn. When he reappeared, Mr. Porter Field, who had seen the mountaineer's wife standing near-by, inquired if she too was not going to see the play. The husband's answer was: "Yes, but I ain't going to do her milking for her."

Afterwards, I spent a little time in Jonas Lie's studio and then dashed to the steamer to meet my son, Jimmy, and arrived just as the passengers were coming off. We motored up here this morning and, in one short week, the country has taken on so much spring beauty.

Rescue Bids, Probably Most Unpopular Bids in Bridge

By Harold Sharpsteen.

"Sit tight," when partner doubles opponents' contract for penalties. "Sit tight," when partner's contract is doubled by opponents for penalties. These two bits of advice are intended for heroes of bridge who find it tempting to "rescue" partner when either one of the two above mentioned situations develop during the bidding.

UNPOPULAR BIDS.

Rescue bids are probably the most unpopular bids in bridge. There are few cases in which rescue suits will bring very good results. The biggest bridge tragedies occur from errors connected with rescue bidding, as when partner rescues a double which does not need rescuing.

Whether a rescue bid should be considered or not depends on the partner you are playing with. If you are playing with a good partner, you have a right to expect he knows what he is doing when he doubles opponent's contract or fails to redouble their double of his contract.

CONSIDER PARTNER.

There is one common bidding situation in bridge which invariably sets the stage for the rescue bidder, as for example: South West North East Pass Heart Pass 1 Spade 2 Clubs Double.

When South overcalls two clubs, after having passed as dealer, he gives opponents the choice of doubling his overcall for penalties or continuing on with their own game possibilities.

REASON FOR OVERCALL.

If South is a good player, he will not make this type of overcall, as a rule. Therefore, if South is a player of experience, and does inject this type of overcall, partner should not attempt to rescue the overcall by taking out in the unbid suit. The overcall in all

Woman's Quiz

Q. When should snapdragons be planted?

A. In the open ground when danger of freezing is past and blooms will be obtained in about ten weeks. For early flowers sow under glass and transplant into beds of warm, dry soil, moderately enriched. If protected by a cold-frame or even a mulch of leaves in the north, the plants will winter well and bloom early the following year.

Q. We recently moved into a rural area where we must rely on a well and cistern for water. If there any way in which we could arrange to have some water heated by the sun to be used for bathing and cleaning purposes?

A. An excellent method of doing this is to have a shallow metal tank, preferably galvanized, to provide gravity flow to the house. The tank should be painted black and must be exposed to the direct rays of the sun.

Make Vegetables Tempting For Children and Adults

By SALLY SAVER.

Often one hears someone say "I don't like vegetables." Perhaps you know any number of persons who like only a few kinds of vegetables. If these persons are members of your family it makes a very real cooking and nutrition problem particularly difficult, because vegetables are one of the musts on every balanced diet. The best way to prevent so many aversions to vegetables in adults is to start with them when they are children. Prepare and serve vegetables in a variety of ways, tastily seasoned, and see to it that children eat them. But, of course, quite a difficult situation is met if one attempts to make children eat vegetables when grown-ups at the same table are turning up their noses and refusing to eat them.

I have seen children who ate without question, spinach, asparagus, broccoli, cauliflower, turnip greens, artichoke hearts, carrots, mashed turnips, slaw; in fact, any vegetable set before them. And I have seen other children who would eat nothing but potatoes. It's all, or mostly all, a matter of training. So begin very early to establish good eating habits, and there are no good eating habits unless a wide variety of vegetables are included.

It is easy to fall into a rut about cooking and serving vegetables. Let's give as much care to variations of cooking and serving vegetables as we do to some of our other foods, meats and desserts for example, and we shall have less trouble getting them eaten. Presented here are some different ways to cook familiar, and perhaps not so familiar, vegetables.

Stuffed Cucumbers.

Peel cucumbers, cut in halves lengthwise, remove soft center portion, blanch in ice water, drain, season and stuff with a forcemeat of minced ham mixed with one-half as much cracker crumbs and seasoned with onion juice. Sprinkle tops with crumbs, add a lump of butter, dust with paprika, place in a buttered pan or baking dish; add a few tablespoons of consommé and bake until cucumbers are tender and crumbs browned on top.

Grilled Eggplant a la Provencale.

Cut eggplant in halves lengthwise, sprinkle with olive oil, season, grill over a slow fire until nice and tender. Arrange on a platter and pour over nut brown butter mixed with crumbs, minced parsley, minced chives and a little garlic.

Artichoke Croquettes.

Peel and blanch Japanese artichokes in cold water to which a little carbonate of soda is added; rinse and cook until tender in boiling salted water. Drain, mash and mix with a white sauce that has been finished with yolk of egg, or add the yolk of an egg separately. Shape into croquettes, dip in egg and crumbs and fry in deep fat.

Braised Turnip Tops.

Wash young turnip tops, blanch in cold water, drain and braise in butter or bacon fat with julienne of carrots and thinly sliced young onions. Moisten with consommé, add a bunch of cooking herbs and simmer slowly until tender. Season well, remove herbs, drain off juice, or, if preferred, slightly thicken a little of the juice with a roux of butter and flour. Serve as you would green cabbage.

New Potatoes Normande.

Peel or scrape new potatoes and slice them. Cook in butter with

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Eggs.

Are eggs boiled 30 minutes too solid food for a 20-month-old child to digest? (Mrs. S. F. D.)

Answer—No, not if the child likes 'em that way. For anyone, a hard-boiled egg is as easy, perhaps easier to digest, than a soft-boiled egg. Raw eggs are more difficult to digest than cooked eggs. Part of the albumen or white of raw egg is indigestible, but cooking makes it more digestible. This is so, notwithstanding the old notion that there was something more "nourishing" or "strengthening" in raw eggs. Only reason for that notion is that invalids in some instances were able to swallow raw eggs mixed into a drink or something of the sort when they couldn't eat 'em as regular victuals.

Hurrah! Another Baby.

Heaven knows I had plenty of trouble when my baby was born, but I believe most of it could have been avoided. So now that we are looking forward to our second some time in September, we want to prepare. (Mrs. F. G. O.)

Answer—Send 10 cents coin and stamped envelope bearing your address, and ask for booklet, "Preparing for Maternity." If you want a copy of the latest edition of the Brady Baby Book (BBBBB book)

Parties Continue To Be Planned For Miss Battle and Mr. Whitner

Miss Margaret Baker Battle and her fiancé, James T. Whitner, continue to form the inspiration for many interesting prenuptial parties. On Saturday afternoon Mrs. James V. Calhoun will entertain at tea at her home on Inman circle in compliment to the bride-elect, and on next Monday evening the members of the choir of the St. John Methodist church will be hosts at a party at a luncheon at their home on Runison road. On the same date the marriage of Miss Battle and Mr. Whitner will be solemnized at a 6 o'clock ceremony at the Peachtree Road Presbyterian church.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold N. Coolidge entertained at dinner last Monday evening in honor of the popular couple, assembling a group of friends at their home on Peachtree street.

On May 27, Mr. and Mrs. Willis J. Milner Sr., and Mr. and Mrs. Willis J. Milner Jr. will entertain the entire wedding party at a luncheon at their home on Runison road. On the same date the marriage of Miss Battle and Mr. Whitner will be solemnized at a 6 o'clock ceremony at the Peachtree Road Presbyterian church.

Mrs. Clara Cassidy Is Honor Guest

American Grove 217, Supreme Forest Woodmen Circle, met at the hall on Monday for a business session with Guardian Willie Bell O'Keeffe presiding, and a birthday celebration for the national director and state manager, Mrs. Clara B. Cassidy. Many distinguished guests were present, including three national officers and seven state officers. They are Mrs. Clara B. Cassidy, national director and state manager; Mrs. Willie Bell O'Keeffe, national representative; Mrs. Emma Brooks, national alternate; Miss Myrtle Hardy, state captain; Mrs. Louise Baumgrass, state attendant of Maple Grove 86; Mrs. Daisy Moultrie, state historian; and Mrs. Jeanie Brown, state junior counselor.

Other visitors present were Mesdames Eleanor Wingate Amanda Vaughn, Kate Thompson, Mayola Odum, Annie Jackson, Annie Pearl Winkle, Opal Story, Ellis Baby, Virginia Brown and Mr. M. M. Brown.

New members initiated were Mesdames Mae Brown Mattie Booth, Misses Mary Hutcheson, Corine Hutcheson, Frances James and Ethel Boach.

A birthday class of new applications in honor of Mrs. Cassidy's birthday was presented to her by state district Captain Blanche Schofield and the Do-A-L-TA girls.

Mrs. Cassidy has recently returned from the state conventions in Pennsylvania and Ohio. She gave a report of these meetings. There were five teams present in the pageant of Pennsylvania convention.

The national convention will be held in New York June 22 to 26 and many members plan to attend. There will be a North Georgia district meeting in Toccoa, Ga., with Mrs. Jeannie Brown president.

ing in June, the exact date to be announced later.

An invitation was given by Guardian Mrs. Emma Brooks, of Maple Grove 86, to American Grove 217 to join with them in a memorial service to be held June 11 at 160 Central avenue. The Dora Alexander Talley Guards will assist in the service.

Mrs. Helen Shearin, financial secretary, was given a tribute by Mrs. Cassidy for her excellent work as secretary of four groves which received four blue ribbons at Omaha.

American Grove Group Meets.

Clara B. Cassidy Service Club of American Grove 217 met at the home of Mrs. Estelle Maddox, 658 Hemlock circle, recently, for a wiener roast after the business session was presided over by Mrs. Annie L. Byars, chairman.

Present were Mrs. Kate Thompson, of La Rocca Grove 264; Mesdames Blanche Schofield, Zola Martin, Jewell Banks, Florence Scarborough, Annie L. Byars, Estelle Maddox, Misses Kathryn Forner, Adelaide Speights, Frances James, Elizabeth Butler, Corine Hutcheson and Mary Hutcheson. Linda Ann Schofield, Donna Martin and Mr. Maddox.

Scarf's fill be made by next meeting for the home in Sherman, Texas, for aged members and orphan children. Next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Bona Martin, 611 Hemlock circle, on May 19.

For Mrs. Cassidy.

Mrs. Clara B. Cassidy, state manager of Supreme Forest Woodmen Circle, will be honored at a birthday party given by Maple Grove No. 86 in their clubrooms at 160 Central avenue this evening. A class of new members will take the initiatory degree. The Grove recently draped its hall with fitting memorial ceremonies for the late John T. Yates, co-founder of Woodmen Circle.

The noticeable superiority of Lenox Park Homes, and general development, are the result of careful planning and personal management by the owners.

Glada Calls Stirling and He Admits He Paid Tess One Thousand Dollars

By JOSEPH McCORD.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE: Glada Lee worries her mother because she dropped her university course after two years, went to the state agricultural college and now is more interested in her successful chicken farm than matrimony. Her father, Ed Lee, a lawyer in Dale City, leading citizen. Her older brothers, Bailey and Trevor, are married; Masters, the youngest, is engaged to Evelyn Barclay, and mother Mary Lee feels that Glada is wasting her time. Mrs. Lee invites their good-looking young pastor, the Rev. Lynn Stirling, to dinner. When she suggests later that Stirling would make a good husband, Glada says she isn't thinking of marriage. The minister appears at the girl's chicken farm and tells her he loves her. At once, she is abrupt in her manner and softens it because of his obvious sincerity. As he goes, he says, "I intend to marry you." When he next visits the Lee he asks Glada to be his friend. Cobb Peters, her farm manager, breaks his leg and she gives Gern Jones, a down-and-out, a job. He gives evidence of culture but has a puzzling manner. Tess Slobury, heavy with make-up, goes to the farm and tells Glada that Masters has killed her for "the Barclay blonde." She can't face this, she says, so goes away and will need $1,000. When Glada says she hasn't that much money and won't ask her mother for it, she says she will go to the Barclays, spoil the wedding and live with them. She works for Evelyn's father in the Kedron trunk. Glada says she will do it. She phones Masters. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT XXI

With fingers that were for from steady, she picked up her phone and gave the paragon number. She must get it done before her courage evaporated completely. As was to be expected, Mrs. Ward answered the ring, but Mr. Stirling was at home and she would call him at once. Glada was hoping against hope that her voice would be recognized and that she would not have to announce her identity. If any one chance to be listening in, the urgency of her message would be sure to pique their curiosity. She tried to keep her tone casual.

"Good morning, Mr. Stirling. I hope you will pardon my calling so early in the forenoon. But I was wondering if by any chance you might be driving out this . . . toward the farm. I would appreciate it if you could stop a moment."

Lynn must have been inspired. "Let me see. . . Why yes, I was just about to have my car sent over from the garage . . . going to make a call in your general direction. I will stop at your place first. Probably within 20 minutes. Not at all," he added in response to a brief "Thank you."

Then he had recognized her voice. And it was very considerable of him not to reveal her identity. Glada thought thankfully. That was one thing less to worry over. Twenty minutes to think over what she would say. She would need that.

But when she saw him just on the other side of the desk, his grave eyes fixed inquiringly on her face, all her carefully rehearsed words vanished from her mind. With a hesitating gesture, she picked up the letter from Masters and passed it to Stirling. He read it through without the slightest change of expression, laid it down.

"I'm exceedingly sorry," he said simply.

"Why did you?" Glada managed in a low voice.

"It seemed the only way out. In fact, it was the only way out . . . to insure the safety of several people. I can promise you that the danger is past. I attended to that. It was part of the price."

"But why didn't you tell me?" "I hoped that it might never be necessary for you to know, Glada. I shall be perfectly candid about it. I was determined to rescue the prospects of your brother and the happiness of that very attractive youngster I met Sunday, if it were within my power. It would have been a tragedy if that blow had fallen. No less tragic for Miss Barclay's parents and for yours. I would have stopped at nothing to avert such a calamity. And besides . . ."

"Yes?" As he hesitated.

"There was yourself. A very great reason."

"But you mustn't . . . I mean I can't let you . . . I'll find some way to repay you."

"I wish it weren't . . . well, it is difficult to discuss that. I appreciate your point of view perfectly, yet it is so far from mine that I . . ."

"There is nothing whatever to discuss," Glada interrupted firmly. "I understand. It shall be as you wish. But, at the same time, I want to make my position clear. You will not agree, but the obligation is not nearly so great as you are thinking. I mean by that the money was mine. But it was absolutely unearned, so far as I am concerned. There was no reason why I should not . . . and every reason why I should . . . use it for others. Where it would do the most good and bring the greatest happiness. I said you would not agree with me." Stirling repeated, noting storm signals in the gray eyes on the other side of the desk.

"But there it is. I am compelled to let you know there was no personal sacrifice involved in my action. I wish you might believe it."

"Of course I don't agree," Glada informed him quietly. "I consider it a personal obligation and I will meet it just as soon as I can. My brother will help me, although I know he is not in a position to just now. You can guess from that letter that I had given my word I paid nothing."

"At least you were truthful," Stirling observed.

"Yes, but I can't explain things to him. I'll have to let him go on thinking I lied about it. It isn't very pleasant."

"No. I can see that. I suppose you have no idea where that person is. I have a receipt, which covers the case very nicely and which she was unwise enough to sign in her eagerness."

"No!" Glada returned sharply. "I don't know. I never want to. I'll find some way to manage. First of all, I shall give you my note, just in case anything should happen . . ."

"There was a stern note in Stirling's voice, one she never had heard. "For that same reason, Glada, I shall tear it up, if you insist on such a thing. There is going to be no record of it. Your word would be ample, if I wished any security. And I do not."

"Exactly," Glada made no response and her caller rose to his feet.

"I suppose there is nothing more to say, except that I hope I haven't sinned away my day of grace with you. I would do it again, you know."

"It was . . . was very good of you," Glada's eyes were fixed on Masters' letter on the desk. Had she caught the sudden longing in the blue eyes looking down on her, her words would have been still more confused.

"And that is as great a reward as I could wish for," Stirling said slowly. "I must be going. Good bye."

"Good bye," she still was staring at the letter when she heard the front screen door close quietly. Then the sound of a motor starting, tires scattering pebbles on the driveway. Mr. Stirling was gone.

Glada wondered dully if Masters expected an answer to his letter; it didn't sound that way. And what could she tell him, anyway? There was no defense to make, without telling the whole truth. And that was absolutely out. As matters stood, Masters would see no reason for her seeming deceit. She didn't blame him for resenting it. Probably the best thing was to wait until she saw him again and trust to luck. That, probably, would not be for some time. Something might happen in the meantime.

She tried to busy herself at the desk, but the air seemed stifling and she decided to go out into the plant, escape from the depressing atmosphere of the room. Almost at once she encountered Gern.

"Hello," she greeted him with an effort at carelessness. "Going after pests this morning?" She nodded at the large can of disinfectant he was carrying.

"Yeah. Want your office?" "I don't think that's very complimentary."

"Well, you just had a visitor. You never can tell."

"That's perfectly disrespectful!" Glada's eyes were smiling. "And the minister, at that. I say you in church Sunday. Did you like it?"

"Not too bad. I thought I'd like to see if your friend really was a preacher. He sure doesn't look it."

"My father said he spoke to you after church," Glada remarked suddenly.

"Yeah?"

"He said he recognized you from the description that mama and I had given."

"Did he? I sort of wondered how he guessed. You must be a good describer. It was very nice of him to notice a stray. By the way, your preacher isn't tied up to the inquisition by any chance, is he?"

"What's the answer?" "I don't know. But I do know that every time he shows up here, you . . . you look like you'd been run through a wringer. Of course I'm out of bounds."

Glada looked at him soberly. If he expected her to be angry, he was no more surprised than she found herself at the moment. She should resent that familiarity and make her displeasure clear. But all she said was, "Don't you think that you are letting your imagination carry you rather too far?"

"Maybe. Imagination is about the only luxury I can afford. When it comes to you, at least."

"Oh," Glada laughed in spite of herself. "Perhaps that is no more than fair, after all."

"I get you. But that doesn't change my mind about that preacher guy. It's none of my business, but it's getting to me. So . . ."

"So what, Mr. Gern Like-in-fern Jones?"

"Nothing. Only, next time, I'm liable to try to take him apart. That's all."

The threat of Gern Jones against the unsuspecting Mr. Stirling had been uttered in the former's familiar, half-humorous fashion. But Glada Lee detected an undertone that caused her to ask sharply, "Do you mind telling me what you mean?"

"I should, but I don't."

"Well?"

"I suppose you have heard about the cat looking at the king. Why shouldn't a mongrel look at a queen?"

"I fail to see what that has to do with the remark of a moment ago."

"No? I'll diagram it for you . . . at the expense of my job. I mean that I've found out in these past few weeks that you are without doubt the loveliest lady in the world. And when I have reason to think that anybody . . . well, I can't take it."

The half-smothered little exclamation was the best Glada could manage at that instant. Ordinarily, she would have dismissed such a statement with a tolerant smile. Gern Jones had a trick of being rather insolent at times without giving offense. But the quietly simple way he had uttered the words "loveliest lady" changed everything about him. It had sounded almost wistful.

"Don't be silly!" Glada attempted to say it sharply, admitting to her bewildered mind that she was not following her own advice any too successfully.

All in the GAME
by Jack Troy

A Class A ball club playing two or three games a week will move into a Class A-1 ball park Friday night for one and all to see.

In short, the Buford Shoemakers, national semi-pro champions, will go into action against a strong Dixie Steel nine at Ponce de Leon park, with no holds barred.

Under the able management of Abe White, former Southern league pitcher, the Shoemakers won their national title in a hotbed of semi-pro competition in the tournament at Wichita, Kan., last summer.

When you consider all the teams that engage in semi-pro baseball in this country, the rise through the ranks to the championship becomes, at once, a commanding performance.

The Shoemakers didn't do it in one try. They weren't far away the first time, and the realization came that for such a gruelling grind as the tournament they needed to be fortified in the pitching department.

So they went back the second time with a better idea of what they needed to win—and they battled through to the title.

The majority of Atlanta baseball fans probably never have seen the Buford nine in action. And this is to be their one and only appearance at Ponce de Leon.

Mr. John Allen's boys and the Dixie Steel team are playing a game to help the military girls' band of Georgia go to the World's Fair in New York.

They're helping out a fine young organization and, at the same time, are providing an opportunity for Atlanta fans to see a first-class game of baseball while the Crackers are on the road.

The Shoemakers will defend their national title this summer and also have been invited to take part in a game at Cooperstown, N. Y., in celebration of baseball's 100th anniversary. The latter game, according to plans, will be played against a major league team.

It will be interesting to see the Shoemakers. Georgia Products Week doesn't start until next week, but here's a chance to witness some outstanding Georgia products of the baseball fields in advance.

PROTHRO'S MASTER STROKE.

Doc Prothro, who for years shadow-boxed on the coaching lines of Southern league parks—remember his two-fisted appeals for base hits?—has done wonders with the Phillies in keeping them out of the National league cellar.

Lavish praise has been heaped upon him for the way he has had the hitherto Phaenting Phils hustling. He has been acclaimed for his handling of pitchers and heady substitution of pinch-hitters.

But the master stroke of all, I think, was taking the Phillies' coach of pitchers and getting a victory out of him at the expense of the Chicago Cubs.

Old Doc did that. We can understand it down our way, but it must have been a shock to the champion Cubs, not to mention the fans of Philadelphia.

Doc twice called on Sylvester Johnson, the 36-year-old coach of the Philly pitchers. On his first outing, the big Swede went up against the three-hit shutout pitching of the veteran Lou Fette and retired for a pinch-hitter in the seventh, having allowed the Bess only five hits and one run.

Johnson wasn't called upon again for 11 days and he was equal to the occasion. He trimmed the Cubs in a masterful fourth-inning, one-run performance.

Of all the things Doc Prothro has done to date, that somehow stands out as the master stroke. And whether or not he can keep the Phillies out of the cellar, chances are the peppy Prothro will attract more attention than the manager who has the pennant winner.

Wonder what he could do with a club like the Pirates or the Cubs or maybe the Cincinnati Reds?

HARRIS NEEDS A HORSESHOE.

It seems to be a question now whether Luman Harris needs a horseshoe or some helpful base hits in the pinch.

The fine young right-hander of the Crackers hasn't been able to win for losing lately. He had a nice lead in two games against the Knoxville Smokies and the Crackers contrived to kick his games away.

And then against Memphis Tuesday he was going along pitching brilliant ball for seven innings and the Crackers allowed men to die on the bases in alarming numbers.

When Harris has it the Crackers haven't and possibly vice versa. The former Birmingham Textile league pitcher won 10 games last year in spite of recurrent illness which kept him out almost half the season.

This year he is bubbling over with health and yet the base-

BOYS' HIGH PAIR TAKE DOUBLES

Memphis School Supplies Both Singles Finalists in Gainesville Meet.

GAINESVILLE, Ga., May 10.—(AP)—Tech High school, of Memphis, Tenn., was assured the singles championship in Gainesville's Southern Interscholastic tennis tournament today as first-seeded Milton Grear and third-ranked Travis Comer reached the finals.

Grear defeated Eddie Self, of North Fulton (Atlanta), 6-4, 6-2, after trimming Joe Shippey, of Waycross in the quarter-finals, 4-6, 6-4, 6-4. Comer defeated Frank Gaia in an all-Memphis quarter-final match, 6-4, 6-3, following a 6-1, 6-1 victory over Jack Sells, of Riverside Military Academy.

Tarl Maddox and Paul Sudan, of Boys' High (Atlanta) captured the doubles title. They won in succession from Stephens and Gilmore, of Riverside, 6-1, 6-2; Jacobs and Sells, Riverside, 6-4, 6-3, and M. Grear and Comer, 6-3, 6-2. Comer and Grear, No. 1 in doubles had defeated the Boys' High pair of John Bethune and Warren Bearden to gain the finals.

Charles Rice, second seeded in singles and new G. I. A. champion from Tech High (Atlanta) was upset by Gaia in a quarter-final match, 6-1, 6-4. Self, ranked fourth, had advanced with an 8-6, 6-4 decision over Bethune, of Boys' High.

The singles finals will be played tomorrow.

Third Hole Tough One For All-Dot

Four Former Champions Were in One Bracket, Kirby Writes.

By DOROTHY KIRBY.
PONTE VEDRA GOLF CLUB, May 10.—Looking over the upper bracket this morning, I found something very interesting. There are four former southern champions in the same bracket. Mrs. Mark McGarry is one of them, but she was beaten today. Mary Brantley, whom I put out, and Marion Miley, my opponent for tomorrow, are others.

Corbin and I have played about six times. In fact, it looks as though we meet in every tournament. At the present writing we seem to be playing the same sort of golf, rather sloppy in spots and good in others.

In my match today I got off to one of my bad starts again, but finally settled down on the fourth hole and did fairly well. The third hole on this course seems to be the big bad one for everybody.

I always take a six and Marion Miley was telling me she chipped all the way over it this morning and had to chip back on her fourth shot.

It's one of those greens where anything can happen and does most of the time. It slopes a hundred different ways.

Mrs. Chandler played the best golf of the day by going out in just 37 strokes and when you do that on this golf course you have really and truly done something. She won handily by 9 and 8, even though she had a badly blistered toe.

I got a new remedy today that

Downs' Hit in Ninth Beats Bulldogs, 6-5

Petrels Take Wild Game to Even Georgia Series; Henry Geraci Hits Homer.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.
Emory Downs' clean hit to center field with two out in the ninth yesterday scored Melton from third and gave the Petrels an even break in the Georgia series, 6 to 5.

It was a wild game in which just about everything happened. "Pop" Barnett, who had relieved Sam Worthington for Oglethorpe in the sixth, walked home the tying Georgia run in the eighth and set the stage for Downs' winning hit.

Worthington and Barnett allowed the Bulldogs only five hits but were in constant hot water as they issued seven free trips to first and were victims of four miscues—two by Worthington himself in the fourth inning.

DERBY WINNER IN FINE FETTLE

BALTIMORE, May 10.—(AP)—Heavy mud on Pimlico's racing strip didn't bother Johnstown, the Kentucky Derby winner, as he breezed a mile and an eighth in 1:59 under wraps in workout today.

With Jockey Jimmy Stout in the saddle William Woodward's great colt pounded off a mile in 1:44 3-5.

Trainer Jim Fitzsimmons pronounced Johnstown in fine fettle for Saturday's forty-ninth running of the $50,000-added Preakness.

Saratoga stable's Volitant, trained by A. J. (Jack) Goldsborough, went a mile in 1:41 2-5.

Johnstown's stablemate, Challenge, worked a mile in 1:42 3-5 under Jockey R. Donoso, who rode Gilded Knight to victory in the Survivor stakes yesterday.

GOES ROUTE.
Alex McCaskill went all the way for Georgia. He allowed 10 hits and fanned seven. He might have fared better but for his own wildness and three team-mate errors. He walked six men.

Henry Geraci, Petrel first baseman, clouted a homer with one out in the fifth inning. Ralph King batted in three runs with a double in the third.

Dan Kirkland got two of Georgia's hits—both sharply hit doubles to left field. Roy Chatham made a neat running catch of Charlie King's fly to kill of a Petrel threat in the eighth.

Georgia scored first — Spook Newsom opened the third by beating out a bunt for a single. McCaskill sent him to third with a

SIR DAMION WINS WITH DON RIDING

Meade Boots Home Field's Horse in Crack Pimlico Field.

BALTIMORE, May 10.—(AP)—Don Meade and Sir Damion beat a crack field of stake racers today as the veteran jockey booted Marshall Field's bay horse to a smashing victory in the historic Dixie handicap at Pimlico.

Returning to action on a Maryland track for the first time in more than two years, Meade made it a gala occasion. He sent Sir Damion bounding home to a two-and-a-half-length victory over Thomas J. Healey's Tatterdemalion to the acclaim of 20,000 fans.

Edward Friendly's speedy little filly, Jacola, took third place, a length behind Tatterdemalion and a length and a half in front of Mrs. Parker Corning's Maryland-bred Thanksgiving.

Sir Damion covered the mile and three-sixteenths route over a good track in 1:53 3-5. He won $22,025 for his owner and returned $19.50, $9.70 and $6.90 for $2 tickets.

The long shot Tatterdemalion returned $41.60 and $17.80. Jacola paid $5.80 to show.

SPERRY INJURES ANKLE, REQUIRES FOUR STITCHES

Spikes Self Sliding Into 2d After Second Straight Hit; Richards Ejected.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 10.—In as weird assortment of baseball as one could hope to see, Atlanta overcame several tough breaks to down Memphis, 11 to 8, here tonight.

At the scheduled starting time, the field was thrown into semi-darkness, when a portion of the lights went out and shortly after things were under way, Manager Paul Richards was thrown out for protesting a play at home plate.

However, as things went on and little Bobby Durham came into the picture, the play turned into the Crackers' favor.

It took the teams 2 hours and 45 minutes to play the thing and with 35 minutes out for light trouble, the fans saw and sat through about as much and varied baseball as one evening could stand.

CRACKERS ANGRY.
Delay by light failure for half an hour must have made the Crackers awfully mad. They swiped at Heusser with such vengeance that three runs crossed the plate in a swift procession.

Stan Sperry doubled down the left field line and went to third on Marshall Mauldin's single. Jack Bolling tripled between right and center, scoring both runners and counting himself on Emil Mallo's long fly to center.

The Chicks were just as mean to Stein, knocking him out in a jiffy. Bush walked and Maxcy sent him to third with a single. Eckhardt hit in front of the plate and was thrown out with Bush holding third, but Bruno walked and Andy Reese punted a two-

Smithies and Cadets Play for Prep Lead

G. M. A. and Tech High clash this afternoon at Piedmont park with the leadership of the city prep baseball league at stake.

The Smithies have won three games and lost none, while the Cadets have won three and lost one. Joe Wilson will hurl for Tech High. Hodges will probably take the mound for the Cadets.

G. M. A. defeated Commercial 5 to 4 Tuesday for its third win. Bishop, Typist hurler, fanned 12 men, while Bjedso, of G. M. A., struck out seven.

Mrs. Chandler Turns in Sparkling 73 in Whipping Mrs. Lynch.

By ROY WHITE.

PONTE VEDRA COUNTRY CLUB, PONTE VEDRA, Fla., May 10.—With Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page Jr., the medalist leading the way, all favorites advanced another step nearer the southern crown today in the second round of the twenty-eighth annual southern women's championship tournament.

Shooting par golf, Mrs. Page eliminated Mrs. Robert Monsted, of New Orleans, 7-6; Mrs. Sam Israel Jr., New Orleans, defeated Mrs. Mark McGarry, St. Petersburg, Fla., a former champion, 4-3; Miss Marion Miley, the defending champion from Lexington, Ky., defeated Miss Peggy Brechly, New Orleans, 7-5, and Dorothy Kirby, Atlanta's sensational young star and former champion, beat Mrs. George Brantley, Jacksonville, another former titleholder, 9-7.

In the lower bracket, Miss Jane Cothran, Greenville, S. C., shot sub-par golf to beat Mrs. S. J. Gillard, New Orleans, 4-3; Mrs. George Wilcox Jr., Miami, Fla., eliminated Mrs. Al Nelson, wife of the Ponte Vedra professional, 7-6; Mrs. Dan Chandler, Dallas, Texas, and twice former medalist, beat Mrs. Walter Lynch, Jacksonville, 9-8, and Mrs. E. L. Donaldson, New Orleans city champion and the only entry in the southern to card an ace eliminated the veteran, Mrs. Dave Gaut, Memphis, 4-3.

LEAD AT TURN.

The winners today were well in the lead at the turn and required only a few holes on the back nine to close out the day's activities.

Mrs. Page was six up at the turn, shooting par golf. Miley was four up and Kirby was seven up, with one over par for her medal. Mrs. Chandler had a sensational first nine score of 37, three strokes under par, and was eight up. She closed out the match on the 10th green. Jane Cothran also shot sub-par golf for an easy victory. Mrs. Chandler's score was the best of the tournament thus far.

Chief interest in the quarter-final round Thursday already is centered about the Kirby-Miley match.

Dorothy has beaten the defending champion four of their last six meetings, the most recent victory being in the quarter-finals of the Bellaire, Fla., winter tournament, where Kirby defeated Patty Berg, the national champion, in the semi-finals.

ANOTHER FEATURE.

The Donaldson-Chandler match in the lower bracket also will be one of the quarter-final features with little to choose. Both players appear to be reaching a peak and played subpar golf most of the way today.

Mrs. Page plays Mrs. Israel in the other upper-bracket match, while Cothran meets Mrs. Wilcox in the remaining match in the lower bracket.

Three former champions, Mrs. Mark McGarry, Mrs. Brantley and Mrs. Dave Gaut were eliminated in today's near-rouses, though they cannot be considered upsets, with the possible exception of Mrs. Israel eliminating Mrs. McGarry.

After a shaky start in which she drove into a sand trap, Kirby settled down to some fine golf and did not lose a single hole to Mrs. Brantley. The Atlantan won two straight, halved the third, won the fourth, fifth and sixth and halved the seventh. Dorothy won the eighth and ninth to go seven up at the turn.

Kirby had only one one-putt green today, the eighth, where she was short with her second shot, but pitched up near the pin for a par.

Mrs. Brantley was short with her irons and also failed to get up to the pin with her approach putt, though she didn't have a single three-putt green.

MILEY HAD TROUBLES. Miley likewise was having trouble with today, and depended almost entirely on her accurate iron play and short chip shots, to gain advantage.

And tomorrow both Miley and Kirby are hoping for better luck on the greens.

Bad and good luck omens over-

FAIR ENOUGH — THEY PLAY FOR TRIP TO FAIR

at Ponce de Leon when Buford and Dixie steel meet. Proceeds will be used to send the band to the New York World's Fair. Dixie steel defeated Fulton Bag, 9-0, yesterday at Glenn Field.

TODAY'S FAIRINGS.
PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla., May 10.—(P)—Fairings for the quarter-finals of the annual women's southern golf tournament:

Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, Greensboro, N. C., vs. Mrs. Sam Israel, New Orleans.

Marion Miley, Lexington, Ky., vs. Dorothy Kirby, Atlanta.

Jane Cothran, Greenville, S. C., vs. Mrs. George Wilcox, Miami, Fla.

Mrs. Dan Chandler, Dallas, Texas, vs. Mrs. E. L. Donaldson, New Orleans.

look Mrs. Page as she drove off the first tee today. She was stung by a bee before she drove off and just as she was walking off the tee, a rabbit ran across the fairway behind her. "I hope that rabbit omen overshadows the bee sting," she said as she hit her second shot.

Three of New Orleans' five entries in the selected circle were beaten today, but still Mrs. Israel and Mrs. Donaldson, finalists in the city tournament, are left from Louisiana. That's one more than any other city in the south has in the quarter finals.

Three of last year's quarter finalists are still battling towards the 1939 title round. They are Mrs. Page, Miss Miley and Dorothy Kirby.

MRS. KAISER WINS.

Mrs. A. J. Kaiser from the West End of Druid Hills Clubs is the only other Atlanta entry left in the tournament. She defeated Mrs. George Griffin Jr., another Atlanta player, 2-1, in the fifth flight today and will play Miss Mary Scammell, of Jacksonville, in tomorrow's quarter finals.

Mrs. O. B. Keeler was beaten by Mrs. H. K. Smith, Jacksonville, 2-1, in the fourth flight and Mrs. Joe Varela, Atlanta's other entry, lost, 6-5, to Mrs. Jerome Knauer of Jacksonville, in the fourth flight.

Mrs. Page, the medalist, won the driving contest with yards to spare.

Mrs. Gant Named 'President for Life.'

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla., May 10.—(P)—Mrs. Dave Gaut, of Memphis, Tenn., who retired after eight terms as president of the Women's Southern Golf Association, was made an honorary life member of the Ponte Vedra Country Club today.

Frank Rogers, director of the club over whose course the 28th annual southern tournament is being played this week, said the honor was conferred on Mrs. Gaut in recognition of her "splendid service."

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla.,

May 10.—(P)—Long drives and accurate close shots that have kept Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page out in front during early rounds of the Women's Southern Golf Tournament paid off another dividend today.

The former National Champion registered from Greensboro, N. C., won the championship flight driving contest and, tied for second place in the approach and putting event.

Mrs. Page scored 23 points in the driving test, her efforts averaging approximately 203 yards. Mrs. Sam Israel, of New Orleans, was second, averaging about 193 yards.

Mrs. O. L. Bobo, of Orlando, annexed the approaching and putting contest with a score of seven. She carded 28 on a pair of holes and a 3 on the third. Mrs. Page, Mrs. George Brantley, of Blackshear, Ga., and Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, scored eight points each.

ball dice refuse to come seven. By all rights he deserves to have at least four games in the win column, but he only has two. If and when Luman's luck changes, he should go to town.

ANDY HELPS SAVANNAH.

Bobby Lamotte's Savannah Indians were haunting the second division of the Sally league before the Crackers sent Alf Anderson to the rescue. Now the Indians have moved up to third place and are thriving on the hitting and fielding of the former Georgia Bulldog.

Andy has gone back to shortstop, the position he played in college, is hitting timely and fielding well. The Indians, in fact, haven't lost a game since he joined them.

Lester Burge doesn't seem to have hit his stride at the plate, but is playing a mean game at first base, according to reports.

Three-fourths of the Indian infield is made up of players sent to the Indians by the Crackers. Besides Alf on short and Burge on first, there's Charles Brewster on second. And Bob Chipman, the young southpaw pitcher sent to the Indians, is winning ball games.

HILL IS SENSATION.

The late afternoon mail yesterday brought some good news from Milwaukee via Douglassville. Some clippings on the feats of sensational Johnny Hill were sent to W. W. Suggs and Mr. Suggs turned them over to G. W. Smith, Johnny's father-in-law. Mr. Smith forwarded the clippings to this writer. It was a sort of triple play.

Anyway, Hill certainly has Milwaukee fans by the ears. Described as "little" Johnny Hill, he is hitting a cool .477. Johnny gained 141 batting points in 24 hours. This was due to the fact that, against Toledo, he collected nine hits in 10 times at bat—eight of them in a row.

As to be expected, Hill's hitting has been very timely. He recently slapped a double in the tenth to start a game-winning rally for the Brewers. And his spark-plug play has advanced the Milwaukee club to within hand-shaking distance of first place in the American association.

The highly touted Freddie Hutchinson, optioned by Detroit to Toledo, made his association debut against Milwaukee and Hill had a hand in beating him, 6 to 5. It's nice to know that last year's Southern league batting champ—the Crackers' ace in the hole—is doing so well.

ship and has continued her good playing in this tournament.

Then in the same bracket are Mrs. Wilcox and Jane Cothran. This will be something, for Jane is about the fastest of the players and Mrs. Wilcox is rather on the slow side so they should have fun.

As far as Mrs. Page's match goes she will have a little more competition than usual for she plays Mrs. Israel who plays a very nice game.

I guess that about sums up the situation for the present.

Mrs. Sherrill Wins Capital City Event

Mrs. George Sherrill won low net honors in the women's tournament staged by club members at Capital City yesterday. Mrs. Sherrill shot a 74.

Second place was won by Mrs. Fonville McWhorter with a 76.

Mrs. M. F. Bass won the special event on the first nine and Mrs. C. K. Liller proved to be the best putter of the meet.

NEW DRUG FOUND HELPFUL IN POLIO

Report Sulfanilamide Derivative Checked Progress of Infantile Paralysis.

CHICAGO, May 10.—(P)—A new hope of combating infantile paralysis during the coming summer and fall with sulphydryde was offered today in a report to the American Medical Association.

The drug, a derivative of sulfanilamide, has already been found highly active in the successful treatment of many types of pneumonia, gonorrhea and some types of meningitis.

Dr. John C. Wagner, of Ponca City, Okla., reported that it had checked the progress of infantile paralysis in a 9-year-old girl after the disease had reached an acute stage.

Three days after the infection was noticeable the child had developed partial paralysis of the arms and right leg; was unable to walk without falling, had a moderate fever and her neck had stiffened.

Dr. Wagner said that after she was given a 24-hour series of doses of sulphydryde her temperature dropped to normal, her neck stiffness disappeared and "her general condition satisfactorily improved."

She is still partially paralyzed, he added, but apparently the disease was arrested in its early stage.

STUDEBAKER REPORTS GAIN IN APRIL SALES

CHICAGO, May 10.—(P)—The Studebaker Corporation, of South Bend, Ind., today reported factory sales of 10,974 passenger cars and trucks in April, exceeding factory sales in the entire second quarter last year.

Factory sales for the first four months this year were 30,720 and compared with 14,126 in the same 1938 period.

Women Need Pain Relief At Certain Times

When that trying time of the month comes, with your nerves all aflutter, accompanied by headaches and backaches associated with functional periods, don't rely upon anything less than "BC" for relief. "BC" is composed of several prescription-type ingredients which are commonly prescribed by many physicians, and which are carefully blended to give you relief in a hurry. If you have never used "BC," please try it and see if it doesn't give you relief in a few minutes. Get a 10-cent trial package at any drug store, make the test, and by comparison we believe you will prefer "BC" for the relief of pain and discomfort due to functional disturbances. "BC" is so easy to take, so delightfully soothing in its effect and so remarkably quick in giving relief that you no longer dread those periods that come at certain times. (Adv.)
